SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

A very pleasant sleighing party took place last week which was arranged by Miss Beatrice Seely and Miss Lottie Belyca and chaperoned by Mrs. A. L. Jones.

Miss Nellie Kane leaves to morrow for a few days' trip to Memramcook on a visit to her sister Mary, who is attending the convent.

The congratulatory reception tendered to Dr. and Mrs. Smith on Monday evening was a most successful and enjoyable affair. At nine o'clock the strains of Mendelsshon's wedding march from the orchestra under the direction of Mr. M. L. Harrison announced the beginning of the evening's entertainment. Then, at the request of the stewards Dr. and Mrs. Smith, with their bridesmaid, Mrs. Wm. Fleming, and their groomsman Mr. G. R. Pugsley, took up a position in the ball room for the purpose of receiving the address which was delivered in a pleasing manner by Dr. J. E. March, who spoke as follows :

"Ladies and Gentlemen: Let me ask your atten-tion just for a moment, while I tell you a story. More than twenty years ago there lived in the love-ly village of Sussex a dainty little maiden—a flower just bursting from the bud and spreading around the odour of spring—and one day as in the old spore iy vinage of Sussex a damay inter match a model of a pring-and, one day, as in the old song 'there came to her a lover, tail and strong and full of manly grace.' To her he was the perfect man, and to him she was not a child, nor a young girl, nor yet a woman. She was the Woman, the Poem, the Type, the Abstraction, the Eternal Enigma! Their souls were in their eyes, and in the words they spoke, and they knew what they had never known before—the Mystery of Love. "Well; with bridesmaid and groomsman at their side, just as they stand again to night, they were married in her father's house, and amid the rejoicing of their friends, were fairly started upon the serious journey of hife. A long time ago it seems to some of us, but miles are short when in good company, and, doubtless, to our guests this evening, the intervening years, radiant with domestic happiness, have seemed all too short.

tervening years, radiant with domestic happiness, have seemed all too short. "Tonight—Dr. and Mrs. Smith, your friends have met together beneath your roof to congratulate you upon having so happily reached the 20th. milestone of your conjugal journey, and to wish you yet many years of contentment and felicity. As they have grasped your hands, and as you have looked into their faces, you have felt more keenly, perhaps, than ever before, the depth and sincerity of their regard and affection. regard and affection. "It is well that friends and neighbors should meet thus upon this, and similar occasions, and any words that I might speak, can add but little to the pleasure and gratification that must swell within you as you hear the stirring "Hail Friend," and the tender "God speed you" that tonight greet you on every hand.

"But besides, being whole-souled and warm-hearted, these triends of yours are practical and common sense people, and they believe in giving tangible expression to the hearty sentiment which animates them. Therefore they have commissioned me, on their behalf, to ask your acceptance of this handsome dinner sett. Believe me, I do so with the very greatest pleasure, and for the sake of the donors, I ask you to put it to such use that it may continually serve to remind you of the 20th. anniversary of your wedding day, and of the many good friends who participated in its celebration." Dr. Smith replied as follows :

"Dr. March and triends :-- Words fail me to ex-press to you the warm and heartfelt thanks which my wife and I feel like uttering to you tonight for your great kindness in coming to join us in celebrat-ing the 20th anniversary of our marriage.

It seems but yesterday when we started out to-gether from my wife's former home, in the lovely vale of Sussex, upon life's journey. The circum-stances were so auspicious that we, and our friends who were then present (many of whom we are glad this week at their residence, on Prince Street. to see with us again tonight), anticipated bright prospects of a happy wedded life. Our hopes and anticipations have been more than realized. The past 20 years have been years of great happiness and for this happiness we are indebted, in no small degree to the many kind friends whom we have made in St. John. We welcome you heartily tonight. We thank you for your great kindness, and wish you one and all every joy which life affords, and for the gentlemen who have formed themselves into a committee to carry out this splendid programme I can only say as I do to all my friends, my latch string is always out to you.

Hetherington, Miss McIntyre; Mr. Rob. ert Wisely, Mrs. R. B. Humphrey.

A programme of fourteen dances was then carried out. Twelve tables of progressive whist were organized, which resulted in the first ladies' prize, a silver tea-gong, going to Mrs. Chas. Miller. The first gentleman's, a silver statuette, to Mr. R. Courtnay. Miss Gregory won the ladies' green star trophy, a silver paper weight and His Honor Judge Skinner captured the gentlemen's booby prize, which was in the shape of a revolver with a thermometer attachment. Supper was served throughout the evening by Caterer Mitchell.

To the committee of the occasion, Dr. Geo. A. Hetherington, Mr. G. W. Hoben and Dr. March, much credit is due for their excellent management. The evening's entire programme throughout its different phrases was complimentary from the gentlemen who attended.

The dance programme, a very dainty production of PROGRESS print, was pronounced the neatest thing seen in many a day.

Handsome souvenir cards kindly presented the committee by Mr. E. J. Armstrong, were distributed among the guests.
