HE SACRIFICED HIMSELF.

Heroism of a Young Japanese Nobleman in a Critical Moment.

The Japanese emperor's army was besieging a fortress. Its number was small, and a relieving army was coming up. It was of immense moment that they should know how long the fortress could hold out. It must capitulate for want of supplies within a week, they could stay and win the campaign for the Emperor.

A young Japanese nobleman volunteered to go into the fortress and ascertain the position of affairs.

He disguised himself, and in passing learned that they had food and water for only two days more.

As he was going out with this precious information he was detected, and the enemy said to him, "We are going to crucify you; but we will let you off on condition—that you go to the wall and tell your people that we have supplies for more than a week."

He replied, "Very well" and went to the wall.

His wife and children in the besiegers camp saw him, his friends were there also and he held up both his hands and said to them, "There are supplies for but two days. Continue the siege and you will capture the place."

He died by a hundred spear points, but he had done his duty to his general.

Blue Stockings of Antiquity.

Professor Rhys Davis has been telling us what women were like in the year 600 B.C. It appears that Buddha had an aunt, and that it was by the influence of this lady of saintly memory that "The light of Asia" was persuaded to allow women to join his religious order. The women followers of Buddha formed themselves into camps each in a separate hut, and without begging audibly lived on the tree girts of the villagers, teaching the girls of the hamlet "letters and philosophy."
