The young ladies of the "Flower Mission Society" held a sale of fancy and useful articles in the Temperance hall yesterday from five to nine o'clock. Ice cream, sherbert, cakes and some home made candies were also offered for sale and found ready purchasers. At the candy stall were found pretty little books neatly written in old English text, containing receipts of the candy sold. These were quickly sold and there will be many households who will revel in candies during the next week to come. A "pitcher" table was a new and novel idea. This was presided over by Mrs. W. H. Todd who proved herself to be a good saleswoman, for a closing time few pitchers remained. The young ladies were all arrayed in caps and collars of various colours to represent different flowers and looked very quaint and pretty. Miss Ellen Todd and Miss Margaret Todd arranged and planned this pretty sale and are to be congratulated on the success of it. The money realized will be spent in buying flowers and luxuries to send the sick on Easter day. It is a lovely work and we constantly hear of the kindness of the "Flower Mission" and of the many homes and weary invalids their flowers brighten.

Club, celebrated St. Patrick's Day, by an entertainment in the Opera House, consisting of a very creditable performance of the drama, "More Sinned Against than Sinning," written by Mr. John L. Carleton, of St. John. The leading role was taken by the author, the cast being,-Squire Hilton, Mr. K. Kelly; Marmaduke Hilton, his son, Mr. J. L. Carleton; Alphonse Belhasen, a land agent, Mr. Miles Agar, of St. John; Dick Harvey, an unscrupulous villian, Mr. John Corcoran; Mayor Lookout, Mr. Hugh Hamilton; Teddy O'Niel, Mr. F. J. Sweeney; Captain DeRalzae, a remnant of the Empire, Mr. J. A. McDonald; Smugglers, Messrs. C. Gillispie, A. McDonald, and H. Melanson, John Jamison, an olden time servant, Mr. E. McDonald; Sergeant, Mr. Bourgeois. The scene of the drama is laid near the Lakes of Killarney, and the events are supposed to take place during the years from 1876 to 1882. The plot is skillfully originated, and well carried out, the motif of the story being distinctly patriotic, and going to prove that Ireland is more sinned against than sinning. The play was well acted throughout, and enthusiastically received, though possessed of the singular disadvantage of being destitute of feminine attractions, as there was not a female character in the cast, from beginning to end, the lady vaguely alluded to as "Marmaduke's betrothed" and who is the innocent cause of all the trouble, which befalls the rest of the company never once appearing, but remaining invisible to the naked eye, like Sairy Gamp's "Mrs. Harris," and leaving he audience in ignorance of her charms. There is no doubt that it detracts from the interest of a play to leave out the female characters, but still the interest was kept up from first to last, in the present case, and the audience were well satisfied with the evening's entertainment. Messrs. Carleton and Agar, who have acted together in the play several times before, were of course, the stars, but the amateurs were not far behind, Mr. Hugh Hamilton, and Mr. F. J. Sweeney doing especially good work in supporting the comedy of the play; in fact, all did so well that it would scarcely be fair to particularize. An orchestra composed of Messrs. Thomas Gallagher, piano; Belliveau, violin; and D. Stewart cornet, furnished the music.
