On Thursday evening St. Peter's hall was taxed to its utmost capacity, the occasion being the presentation of a drama entitled "Mary Queen of Scots." The young ladies who formed the cast acquitted themselves very creditably and reflected great credit on the lady to whose care the educational studies were entrusted. So realistic was the scene wherein Rizzio was struck the fatal blow that an audible shudder passed through the vast assemblage and Mr. James McHugh was found in a spasmodic state at the lower end of the hall. The only fault to find and one to which I have frequently referred with regard to all our amateur performances, is that the performers invariably speak too low. Taken altogether, however, last night's entertainment was a great success.
