FREDERICTON.

[PROGRESS is for sale in Fredericton by W. T. H. Feeney and J. H. Hawthorne.]

Nov. 15.—Much regret was expressed here this morning, when it was learned that word had been received from St. Andrews, telling of the serious illness of Chief Justice, Sir John Allen, who is now lying in bed.

His son, Mr. T. C. Allen left today for St. Andrews, and other members of his family will go to him tomorrow. The latest accounts received from him state that he is improving.

Quite the musical event of this week is the organ recital to take place in St. Paul's church, to-morrow evening, when Mr. Ford, of St. John, will deliver a Fredericton audience with his superb manipulation of the ivories. Some of our own favorite songsters will also take a part, among them Mrs. Black, Mrs. Bridges, Mrs. Crockett, Mr. H. V. Bridges and Prof. Bristowe.

Among the strangers visiting the city during the past week was an English military gentleman. Some rumor says he was not here on military business, however, but to renew acquaintance and perhaps something more with one of our fair maidens—but more anon.

On dit, that we are so much for Mr. P. G. and Mrs. Ryan as premier residents. If this be true many friends are only waiting to extend to them a warm welcome. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan paid us a short visit last week.

Mrs. F. S. Shute has the sympathy of her friends in the death of her father, Mr. J. W. Moore of St. Stephen, which occurred on Monday. Mrs. Shute is at present visiting at her old home.

The fine weather of the last few weeks has brought out the pedestrians. On Sunday a dominion official, a bank official and a dry goods accountant released from the arduous toils and confinement of the week, started for a walk. The sky was clear, the air exhilarating and the trio deriving energy from each inhalation walked and walked and walked over the classic hills of Hantsville; on, on, toward the emerald Vales of "Cork."

But to the sequel—Old Sol dipped himself in golden splendour behind the western hills; "Night spread her mantle over the sky and pinned it with a star," the church bells rung out the call for evening worship, yet they came not the hours pass they come not. Northumberland street is aroused, anxious wives left their fireside and with pallid faces asked each other where can they be? The sisters, the cousins and the aunts echoed the cry, "where can they be?"

The water works station assembly the braves of West End, who equipped with horn, lantern and gun, form a search party and march to the rescue. Regardless of danger, chilly night, or midnight gloom, they sail forth, trip past Victoria hospital, past government House, past the old Indian burial ground, where headless ghosts perambulate in the witching hour, "Onward braves!" bark: bark: hear you not steps on Balie's bridge? Hurrah! 'Tis the returning wanderers, and with a welcome shout that went reverberating through the hermitage they clasped them to their arms. They hasten home, the stalwart form of the coming season, the burly moustache of a lordly poet who swam "Hellespont," 't'ot Garden's Creek, and the namesake of that brave explorer who walked to death and glory, and polar snows; a goodly trio. How warm the greeting from wives, little ones and all; what tales of funny escapades, and hair breath escapes they tell. At all, the weary wanderers, save disappointed office seekers, waiting as ever, for cushioned chairs and office desks; ready to step into dead men's shoes. CHICKET.

Mrs. Archibald, of Truro, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Mcweeney.

The "Solfege Club," assisted by local talent, produced the opera "Gypsy Queen" in the opera house on Wednesday evening, under the direction of Miss Lulu Baird. The different characters were well taken; the most prominent being "Kossile," as sung by Miss Allie Wetmore. She was in excellent voice and all her solos were well received. A solo by Miss Annie Cooke was well rendered and certainly merited its hearty appreciation. Miss Lulu Baird as the Gypsy Queen and Miss Jennie Baird as the Fairy Queen, deserve great credit for the splendid manner in which they acted and sang their several difficult parts. They were welcomed by a large audience. The duets, trios, and quartettes all deserve a good share of praise, for they were much enjoyed. The Fairy Band looked very pretty, and if anything sang their choruses more evenly than the Gypsies.

The closing chorus was grand. Under the leadership of Prof. O. Harvey Watts the orchestra played admirably. To listen to the orchestra is alone worth the price of admission. It comprises a full orchestra and is a very necessary adjunct to the opera house entertainments. Prof. Watts has furnished us with something the need of which has been painfully felt by our theatre goers.

As a rule local entertainment receive excellent patronage in Moncton, and we might easily have public they may rest assured of a bumper house.

Congratulations to Dr. and Mrs. Church on the arrival of a little daughter. CLOTHO.
