A Fight with a Boa. "While lying in the interior of Pernambuco, Brazil," said a New Yorker the other day, "I once had an encounter with the scurruyba or aquatic boa. One day one of my cattle strayed away, and I sought it at a pool where the animals used to go for water. While I was waiting, the bullock approached, and when in the act of drinking, suddenly began trembling like an aspen, being apparently unable to move. Then for the first time, I perceived a fearful scurruyba or water boa, which, with its tail coiled around the bullock's back, had panted its grip on the bullock's back. As the animal attempted to escape, the snake drew out till it was but the thickness of a cable. Giving it play, and then swelling up, it drew the creature in toward the tree. This it repeated till the bullock was exhausted; then suddenly it loosed its tail from the tree and began to wind around the body of its victim. When it had got to a considerable tension I sprang from my lurking place and drove my knife between two of the vertebrae of the boa. The keen blade pierced through, and soon the reptile was unable to do any injury. In a few minutes I despatched it, and drove my bullock home loaded with the booty.

O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla."
