Universal regret is expressed for the death of Mrs. William Grey, which occurred on Monday morning last at her home on Main street. It was a sad surprise to so many, for although she had been ill for some time she still appeared to keep hopeful. Find His hoes to fit.

Among the recent business arrivals on Germain street is Mr. Joseph I. Noble whose announcement appeared in the last issue of Progress in attractive form and is also in another part of this paper. Mr. Noble is a young man who has already secured an enviable reputation as a worker in leather. Every man who respects his feet has one shoemaker who can fit him more comfortably than any other, and it is Mr. Noble's good fortune to have many such customers.

Further Up the Street.

The grocery store of Mr. W. A. Porter, well known hitherto as situated on the corner of Mill and Pond streets, has been moved a few doors up Mill street, the premises he formerly occupied being required for an hotel office. Mr. Porter has always kept a first class grocery in this section, and the large trade he has worked up will no doubt follow him the few steps to his new quarters.

SWEETS TO THE SWEET.

My Lady Enhances the Ivory Polish of the Bath with Subtle Fragrances of Posies.

Individualism, which obtains in all matters of dress, has found its way into the realm of scents, and certain perfumes have become associated with certain ladies, as in the instance of "Diplomacy," but no one knows quite what the perfumes are, for fear of imitators. Indeed, so subtly sweet and intangible are the odors affected by one belle that she is accused of having a "private still." Another fancy is to combine the scent of a flower with the gown which reproduces its tints, and in accordance with a novel violet gown has sachets of violet powder in the hem and inside the bodice, and is folded away in wrappings sprayed with the perfume of the flower. Another woman fond of Japanese crepes and silks goes in for hasu-no-hand, and since the mention in an African romance of the sacred African lily the perfume of that flower has been quite in favor with a clique of the author's friends. The perfume of the Datura, or Indian thorn apple, is the rage in Paris. It is only the faintest of sweet odors that are employed, and they emanate from all the folds of the garments, leaving a delicate trail of fragrance when the wearer passes or moves, and it is the result of eternal vigilence in the matter of sechets and perfumed cases, sprays for the bath and the hair, and beneath it all the cleanliness that is indeed next to Godliness. To shake out two or three ounces of strong perfume on a handkerchief will not produce the desired atmosphere of fragrance.

Some Costly Perfumes.

The most expensive perfume in the English market at present is the essential oil of rose petals, or otto of roses, £120 per lb. The essential oil of jasmine is quoted at £108 per lb.; ambergris, £90 per lb.; musk, £84 per lb. In this country some £48,000 worth of perfumed spirits, fats and essential oils is imported yearly, upon which 16s. 6d. per gallon is levied. The most powerful natural perfume is animal muskand also the most permanent. In a single perfume distillery of Cannes there are used yearly 100,000lb. weight of acacia flowers, 32,000lb. jasmine blooms, 20,000lb. tube roses, 140,000lb. rare flower leaves, and smaller quantities of other perfumes.
