CHAMP.

The desire to be well dressed is laudable. All well dressed women add to the sum of refinement and social grace of the community. A lady is well or ill dressed in proportion as the material of which her costume is composed is perfect or imperfect in quality. The best basis for a beautiful costume is found in the finest of the dress fabrics, because the material is so flexible, soft and rich, while having every quality of durability, that, in the hands of the skilled modiste, that perfection of contour, and to every woman's heart, is communicated to it in a most conspicuous degree. Ladies should ask for Priestley's black dress goods.
