FIRST STRIKE ON RECORD. Roman Flute Players Successfully Resented

Exclusion from a Banquet.

Livy, in his famous book, the Annals," ix., 80, relates in the following suggestive words the story of a singular strike which occurred at Rome in the year 300 B. C., and was probably the first strike ever known "That year occurred an event little worthy of being related and which I would pass in silence had it not appeared as involving religion. The flute players, dissatified because the latest censors had forbidden them to take part in the banquet in Jupiter's temple, according to the ancient custom, withdrew, every one of them, to Tibur, so that nobody was left at Rome to play during the sacrifices. This incident shocked the religious sentiment of the senate, and the senators sent messengers to invite the inhabitants of Tibur to make every effort in order that the players should be restored to the Romans. The Tiburtines, having promised not to neglect anything necessary for that purpose, caused the flute players to come to the place where the senate met and exhorted them to go back to Rome. Seeing that they could not prevail upon them to do so they employed a stratagem in keeping with their character. On a day have been the guests of Mrs. Josiah Wood, have of festival, under the pretext that music would increase the joy of the feast, every citizen invited the flute players individually been spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. to his house, and wine, of which people of that profession are usually fond, was given Mrs. Arthur Casey, of Amherst, and Mrs. Huestis | to them in such quantities that they fell into a deep sleep. They were thrown into wagons and transported to Rome. They only became aware of what had happened on the day after, when dawn surprised them lying on the carts, which had been left in the forum. A large crowd had assembled and they were induced to promise that they wouldremain at Rome. The right of attending the banquets was restored to these flute players."

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL BIRD.

Tee Quezal of Guatemala With all the Rain bow's Hues.

The Quezal of Guatemala is considered the most beautiful bird in the world. Its plumage vies with the rainbow and shines with a metalic luster. MAGNIFICENT CONTEMPT.

A Little story Which Shows How Deceitful Appearances Are.

A good story showing how appearances are sometimes deceitful comes from Russia. At a certain famous restaurant in St. Petersburg six somewhat dandyish officers of the Imperial Horse Guards sat drinking THE STEAMER "CLIFTON champagne. Not far from them sat an insignificant little man with a shabby and an unkempt beard, and a glass of liquor in tront of him.

It was not long before he became aware that he was being ridiculed by the officers. By-and-bye, as they became more and more offensive in their remarks on his personal appearance, etc. he called for the waiter and said :

"Bring six bottles of your best champagne!

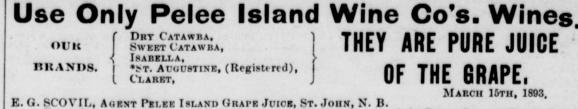

The waiter hesitated.

"Did you hear what I sail?" asked the little man. The waiter brought the wine and six glasses.

"Take these glasses away and fetch basin-one as large as you can find," said the man. The waiter again hesitated, but obeyed instantly at the repetition of the order. "A piece of soap !" was the next order. It was brought. "A towel! The waiter handed him one. "Now open the bottles !" The waiter did so.

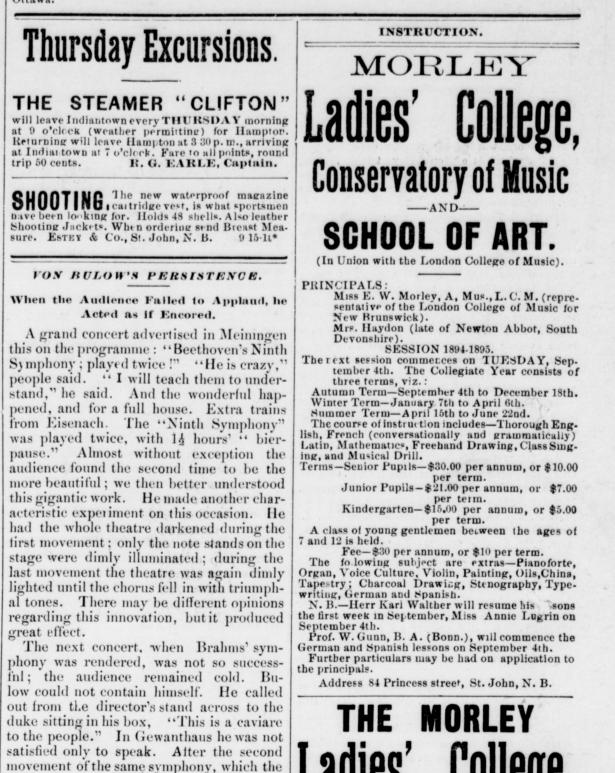

The little man now filled the basin with the contents of six bottles, rolled up his sleeves, washed himself in the costly fluid, wiped his hands, laid a one hundred rouble note on the table and, casting a look of withering contemp: on the officers, strutted first movement; only the note stands on the

An Anecdote of Casimir-Perier.

Once, during the schooldays of the new president of the French republic, his protessor in geography asked him: 'Perier, give us the exact position and indicate the latitude of the Gambier group. 'Casimir-Perier crossed his arms tightly upon his chest, looking very perplexed. One of his neighbors whispered to him the wrong answer, whereupon the professor gave him the exact position of this little group, which belongs to the more important French establishment of Tahiti, and, after a short pause, and with a little point of irony, said, You ought to know that. Perier, because it is thanks to your grandfather that France acquired the ascendancy in these parts of the world; it was through his efforts and entreaties that the dusky queen of these islands was induced to come to France; and the men of my generation still remember the conneal songs which celebrated the event.' Perier blushed considerably; but, holding his head still higher, answered the professor with his quick and peculiar diction: 'I will most certainly go over this lesson again and try to be more proficient at the next lecture; but so far as the deeds of my grandfather go, they are so numerous that I am not old enough yet to know them all.

 The Ash on a Cigar.

There are some men who have certain fads about smoking, and some of these fads are curious and expensive. I know a man who believes that the retention of the ash on the end of the cigar makes the cigar smoke better and taste better. He says if he were a rich man he would never smoke a cigar after the ash had fallen from it. I attempted to persuade him that the cigar that retained the ash was possibly better because it showed by this that it was Took Poison by Mistake more evenly and closely rolled and prop-

A Devoted Mother Bear.

During an exploring expedition in the Arctic regions several years ago, said an officer of the navy recently, some of the men in our party used to spend considnatus of the West, this name by Byron; erable time in hunting the polar bears. the Deliverer of America, the Father of I joined a party of hunters one day, but His Country, the Step-father of His Coun- the pathetic sight I witnessed deterred me from ever seeking that kind of sport again. We were in an open boat, and had not gone far before we sighted a big bear with two cubs lying on the ice not far distant. When we drew near enough the sailors threw them great lumps of sea horse flesh, and these the old bear divided between her cubs, reserving only a small portion for herself. Then, when all three were happily feeding, the sailors fired, killing the cubs almost instantly, and severely wound ing the dam. It would have drawn tears of pity from any but the most unfeeling to have marked the affectionate concern expressed by the poor beast in the last moments of her expiring young. Though she was dreadfully wounded, she tore another lump of the sea horse flesh in peices and laid it before them. When she found they would not eat she laid her paws first on one and then on the other and tried to raise them up, all the while moaning piteously. Finding at last that they were lifeless, she raised her head toward the boat and uttered a growl of despair, which the men returned with another volley of bullets. Then she fell between her cubs and died licking their wounds.

Coleridge and the Candle,

It is related that Lord Coleridge sprang into eminence as a lawyer by adroitly seizing a simple incident while he was pleading the cause of a man on trial for murder. In the course of his long argument a candle in the jury box flickered and went out, leaving the court room in darkness. He stopped speaking, and the silence in court for a moment was oppressive. The scene, with its dark shadows, its grim faces, the scarlet robes of the judge, and the haggard face of the murderer, was worthy of Rembrandt. The usher replaced the light, at the bar is in your hands. You can take it—by a word. You can extinguish that life as the candle by your side was extinguished a moment ago. But it is not in your power, it is not in the power of any of us-to restore that life, when once taken, as that light has been restored." The tone in which the words were spoken, the cadence of the voice, and the action of the orator, with the inspiration of the scene and hour, produced a thrilling effect. The jury acquitted the prisoner, and Coleridge's fortune was made. He was never without a brief after that.
