The ball room was made very beautiful, with the help of bunting and flags, and innumerable flowers; among them golden rod shone the brightest, the walls of the hall being quite covered with it. The ball room was lighted with Japanese lanterns, and piano and banquet lamps, which gave a soft light that was most becoming. In one corner of the hall a canopy of flowers was arranged; here Mrs. Gardner, and Mrs. Copeland, assisted by Mrs. C. E. Swan, Miss Copeland and Miss Robbins, and Mrs. Lowell Copeland, received the guests. Banners of yellow satin with the order of dances written upon them, were hung on the walls, and the usual programme of dances was dispensed with.
