Miss Cuttin's recital on Wednesday evening was a very pleasant affair and quite largely attended, she being a former resident of Amherst, and coming after four years absence from Boston where she has been studying elocution and the delicate system of culture from the best teachers. Her manner was very pleasing and all the movements gracefully performed to an accompaniment on the piano played by Mrs. C. O. Tupper. Miss Cuttin also assisted with the entertainment at a sociable in the Baptist church on Tuesday evening, where her readings were appreciated to an extent.

Master Charlie Hillcoat, who has been engaged as organist in Christ church for the coming year, resided at the organ on Sunday last, in a most capable way. He belongs to a very musical family and has been teaching in the boys' choir for a year or more, to his future it is mainly speaking full of promise both vocally and instrumentally. Mr. G. A. Munro has been his instructor for the past two years, and has certainly much to be pleased with in the excellent technique and proficiency of his pupil. [PROGRESS is for sale at Parrsboro Book Store.]
MAY 29.—The Queen's birthday was celebrated by numerous fishing parties to rural localities. The attraction in town was the tea in St. George's hall. The ice-cream and other refreshment tables were extensively patronized all the evening. There was some excellent music too, a few numbers on the violin by Dr. Mackenzie with Mrs. Gibbons accompanying, and songs by Miss Beckman. This was only appreciated I fear by the people in the immediate vicinity of the performers, as the hall was packed with a standing, jostling crowd. A very good song indeed was realized.

I have to tell this week of the death of Mrs. A. C. McDonald, while she has been for years an invalid it was not the slightest bit that she had so near she passed peacefully away on Wednesday evening the 23rd inst. Her kindly manner and warm heartedness made Mrs. McDonald a general favourite.
The society sea has been very calm this spring, not a ripple was seen on its surface. Not a dance, not an "at home," nor anything that gave signs of life. However the buds and leaves of June are going to see the first of the usual waves of pleasure that submerge Picotou. I hear of a large dance to be given next week in fact I think the invitations are already out. May it be the beginning of quite a number.

PART II.
The Harvest Moon, Pastoral Cantata, By Franz Abt.
Introduction and D. H. Smith & Co.
According to a fanciful legend of the Black Forest, it was the custom many centuries ago, for the peasant maidens to assemble on the first night of the Harvest Moon, and to proceed to a spot known as the Fairy's Grotto, a stalactite cave, situate at the bottom of a deep ravine. Arrived there they sang songs and dances in honor of their fairy who was supposed to be his occupant, and endeavored by these means to propitiate her into granting their several wishes, such as desire for rank, wealth and beauty, etc. On one of these occasions, and whilst the supplicants were in the cave, a storm of unprecedented violence arose, and vast volumes of water rushing down the ravine overwhelmed and drowned the unfortunate maidens. The legend continues, that the fairy, taking pity on them, they were transformed into beautiful Water Lilies, and are still to be seen growing luxuriously on the spot where they met with their untimely fate.

Out of respect to the memory of the lost ones, the peasant maidens of the present day proceed in procession (on a similar date) to the scene of the tragedy and pour forth their sympathy in songs and music. They, however, start at early morning, and return at mid fall. The journey to and fro is embellished by songs and music.
