So to Captain Douglas had been assigned the prison. The work had been going on for few days on the Captain's part.

Charlie and his father were soon ready and reached the fort in about twenty minutes. The gang of convicts were at work slinging an old gun to the axle of an immense cart drawn by eight mules. The captain reined up alongside and watched the completion of the job ; and as the teamsters whipped up their mules and started off, he beckoned the sergeant to

CLOSED FOR THE VACATION.

If you Leave Your House in Summer Leave no Chance for Microbes.

Before closing the city house for the warm season a thorough ventilation should take place, so thorough that good air may penetrate the darkest recesses. Corners should be left as clean as centres, plumbing as carefully scrubbed as though occupancy were to continue, and every room left with ventilation of outside air through the whole season.

The kitchen and cellar should be especially cleaned and renovated, and let it be said right here that to clean a cellar had died away that the captain bethought is not merely to sweep the floor clean and pack rubbish away under the stairs. 'Very well, sir; but shall I send Hogan, or keep him with me?

'Send him above, where I can watch him,' replied the captain, as he lifted Charlie out of the cart. 'Carry that box of dynamite upstairs the first thing, and place it on top just outside the tower. It will be safe there, and after you have everything else put away, you can then carry it down to the magazine.'

In a few moments more the parties were at work. The sergeant, with seven men, was taking out boxes packed with grape and canister and shells for the large guns, and were carrying them down to the magazine at the end of the casement row. One guard stood with loaded gun at the end of the first casement, where boxes of ammunition lay piled up, and the other stood near the magazine at the other end of the row, so that not a movement could be made by the convicts without being seen. Upstairs on top of the fort, the three convicts, one of them being Hogan, were busily engaged under Captain Douglas, in rigging up the derrick tackle. A guard stood near by one side, where he could see them plainly.
