Having seen in a Toronto paper your remedy advertised, I procured, through my sister, a bottle of your medicine. Upon trying it, I began at once to mend, and in a short time entirely regained my health, gaining in eight days 13 lbs. Today I am well and hearty, which blessing, under God, I owe (as I think) to your medicine, K. D. C.

Yours truly,

LADIES' COLLEGE NOTES.

SACKVILLE, March 13.—Seldom has a more enjoyable evening been spent in Beethoven hall than on last Friday, when Miss Ayer's violin pupils gave a recital. The stage was tastefully arranged with potted plants in bloom, the grand piano was open to its widest extent and the large bust of Beethoven, from his red velvet background, seemed to look less sardonic than usual and even to smile on the fate scene below. While the inevitable tuning was in progress, a large audience assembled, so large that a number of extra seats had to be brought into the aisles. People were shown to their places by ushers in dainty white dresses and carrying wands, decorated with white ribbons and flowers.

The "Impressibles" were there in force but on this occasion were pretty quiet, probably in deference to Miss Ayer, who is a favorite with the boys. They would persist however in chewing the pungent peppermint to a most overpowering extent but perhaps they intended it for incense.

The opening allegro by the advanced and junior orchestras was played with a precision and finish that showed great care on the part of both pupils and teacher.

Miss Florence Stockton, who, in her quaint blue gown, looked like a dresden china shepherdess, gave a vocal solo with good expression but the song was a trifle heavy for her voice.

The waltz by Misses Johnson, Boal, and Fairley, tripped off in fine style and seemed to leave a very inspiring effect on the toes of the audience.

Miss Lillian Johnson's violin solo was excellently rendered and her calm selfpossession was most enviable.

Then the advanced orchestra played a charming accompaniment to Miss Ayer's "cello, the soft deep notes of which sounded like waves on the shore and the violins were as the murmuring of tall pine trees.

Miss White, looking very cosy and bonnie, gave a reading in her usual happy manner. Her selection sadly needed a climax, but as she looked and spoke well she received a hearty encore, as indeed did nearly every member.

The three violin solos by Misses Florence, Dorothy and Susie Wood were all extremely good. Miss Susie was perhaps the most noticeable from her extreme youth. Her little chubby hands that one might suppose would be more at home darning a doll, never faltered, and she played her first solo in public with the ease of a veteran.

The young men of the club gave a rondo, the repeating movement of which was listened to with pleasure.

Mrs. Harrie Chappelle played a difficult piece on the piano and played it well.

There was a chorus, led and trained by Miss Lacks, the air was the old familiar "Rose Waltz" and was certainly suitable for the "rose and garden of girls" who appeared on the platform in their pretty light evening dresses. There were some very sweet pieces of music, but the most noticeable was a quartet, the "Weib quartette" was one of the features of the evening. The cradle song they gave was so dreamy and soothing with its rocking measure, that our eyes closed in spite of ourselves. Perhaps the close air of the hall had something to do with it, for it was uncomfortably warm, on account of the girls' tight dresses.

The mandolin-screend was played principally by picking the strings and was a capital imitation, you quite expected to see a case of nut thrown open somewhere and flowers showered on the tuncful lover.

The last number, by the advanced orchestra, was a very taking melody and was rendered with the same harmony and finish that characterized the whole concert.

Mr. Richard Archibald gave a solo by request. Owing to ill health he was not up to his standard, but his playing is such that it is a pleasure to him under any circumstances.

It is a matter of deep regret to every one that Miss Ayer has decided not to return next year. When she was here three years ago, the department was in a rather languishing condition; the class now numbers thirty, with some most promising soloists. The faculty is a most instructive and thoroughly competent and popular as Miss Ayer.

At the close Mr. Landon announced that for some time in April he had secured the services of the celebrated blind player of Boston, Mr. Baxter Perry, and though the tickets would have to be a little higher than usual, he hoped on one would give the chance of hearing this excellent pianist.

On Saturday evening an entertainment of a very different sort was given by the ladies who lectured on love, courtship and matrimony. The transition was as great as what Lucifer must have experienced when he took his first known voyage. The subject was a most reliable one to begin with and while a good deal of historical information was given, the lecture did not contain one thought that was elevating or uplifting. It was all materialistic and of the earth, earthy. Mr. Powell is a man of unusual abilities and it is unfortunate he did not use them in such a way as to use the lecture course in a more happy manner. It forcibly reminded me of one of those crinkled sugar plums, dear to our childhood, which, when eaten, was sucked of a liberal allowance of sweet, left a nasty, bitter, bitter seed in your mouth. The audience was large but a number longed ardently for the Arab's magic carpet, so they might unobscured and "silently steal away."

The public is becoming a little sceptical about waterpooled goods, whether for men or women. Claims have been made which were never substantiated. And at the best they had a waterproofproof look about them which was too often embarrassing. It is the distinguishing merit of Priestley's Cravenette that they are precisely like the same goods not waterproofed. They are absolutely rainproof and yet porous, though there is nothing to show the rain-repelling quality. Priestley's trademark "The Turnished Board" will always be found in these goods.
