MARCH 13 .- The children's ball given by Miss Mattie Harris in the St. Croix hall, on Thursday evening, was certainly the prettiest affair of that kind ever given here. It was the ending of Miss Harris' dancing class, and; there were nearly a hundred children. Almost every one on both sides of the river were interested, and the hall was filled with the triends of Miss Harris as admiring spectators. At eight o'clock Miss Harris entered the hall. She was prettily attired in an evening gown of black lace over violet silk, trimmed with violets and black and violet ribbons. She was assisted by Miss Grace Nichols who wore a costume of pale blue and black silk, Miss Mae Jones, who was attired in black with a plaid silk waist, and Mrs. Mason, who wore a street costume of novely cloth. The grand march then began and the children came into the hall. It was a lovely sight, and one could only think of a bunch of lovely flowers, there were so many pale blue, pink and white dresses and pretty faces. After the march there was a two step quadrille and a pretty dance called the "Amsterdam" then came the gem of the ball the highland fling then came the gem of the ball the highland fling danced by two tiny maidens of five years, Addie McAndrews, daughter of Mr. George McAndrews and Alice Delaney; they also waltzed together in perfect time and with a childish grace that was lovely. The mother goose quadrille in which the dancers were dressed in costumes copied from Mother Goose fashion book and while dancing sang the rhymes suited to the different costumes. Miss Lottie Hnghes then danced a dance ealled "La Beaute", in a most graceful and spirited style, which Beaute", in a most graceful and spirited style, which was greatly admired and won for her rounds of applause. There was also a Spanish dance in which the young ladies were attired in Spanish costumes. This was followed by a dance called "Chantangua" square in which twenty young ladies took part, and the "Travata" and lastly the "Lancers". Ice cream and cake was then served. It was a lovely evening, every one was pleased and no one wanted to go home, but like all pleasant things it came to an end,
