good time, where they found the hotel brilliantly lighted and all arrangements made for the comfort and convenience of the guests after their drive. The sweet strains of orchestral music helped add to the already handsome decorations of the bail room. Appropriate mottos such as "It is not good that man should be alone,""Hearts are trumps,""We're open for engagements," &c., adorned the walls. In the dining room a gorgeous supper was spread with almost every conceivable luxury to suit the most epicurean taste; the table being three sides of a square enabled all the guests to be seated at table. The bousehold staff serving made the management perfect. The dining hall was most artistically fes. tooned with bunting and flags.

The hospitable bachelors all wore as boutonniers, a small key tied with white ribbon, whether in tended to signify that they were still allowed to carry a latch key, or merely suggestive of a possible opening to the supposed impregnable bachelor heart, the ladies were not able to make out. The chaperons were: Mrs. W. C. Gordon, Mrs. T. C. Allen and Mrs. McLearn. Mr. Jasper Winslow was the very efficient secretary of the committee and Messrs. Robt. Barker and A. R. Tibbits floor managers. The handsomely printed p. ogrammes were most chaste in conception, one dance being thoughtfully left for ladies' choice. The return to the city being made about three in the morning all voting a jolly time had been spent and wishing more such dances may be given eve many of our gay you g bachelors join the noble army of benedicts.
