Hamm was ablaze with hight, and gaiety reigned supreme; it was the oc casion of a ball and reception given in horor of their only daughter Miss Josephine Hamm. The night was a charming one, so the guests could promenade upon the lawn which was bright with numerous colored lights and lanter's, and was decorated with fl gs and tents. The spacious carriage house was trimmed with flags and flowers, and was converted into a ballroom, the floor being covered with can vas to enable the dancers to dance easily. The Grman band which has been in town for a week or more was stationed on the piazza ner the carriage house, and played their choicest and liveliest airs and for hours the dancing waxed long and merry. Inside the house the floral decorations were lovely, the drawing room in which Mrs Hamm and Miss Josephine Hamm received their guests, was decorated with brilliant red flowers and ferns. There were a number of red lights in this room and the effect was most brilliant. The larger drawing room was decorated with yellow flowers and ferns, and yellow lights lent a soft glow which was most coming to those who occupied this room. dining room decorations were of these sweet and favorite summer flowers, sweet peas, were arranged so tastefully that the room was a veritable bower of love liness; supper was served at twelve o'clock.
