A week or two ago a very brilliant reception was given in Los Angeles, which may be of interest to Progress readers. It was given by Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Blinn, in honor of their son, Irving L. Blinn, and his wife, who was formerly Miss Genevieve Nannery, of this city, and whose marriage, it will be remembered, took place a month or two ago. The reception was on a most magnificent scale, and there were over five hundred names on the guest list. The following will give some idea of the beauty of the decorations.

The hostess was assisted in receiving by Mrs. T. D. Simpson, Mrs. W. H. Blinn, Mrs. J. H. F. Peck, Mrs. C. B. Jones, Misses Theodore and Miss Florence Jones. Mrs. Blinn, who wore an elegant gown of palest blue brocade satin, demurely trained, with garniture of iridescent pearl passementerie. Mrs. Irving L. Blinn (nee Nannery) wore her lovely wedding gown of cream satin with garniture of crease chiffon. Delightful music was rendered a rough the evening by a harp, two mandolins and (bells). The house was exquisitely decorated under the care of Mrs. Bancroft. The reception room was in bridal white, the bride and groom standing beneath a pair of white doves suspended from the ceiling, white satin ribbons forming a true love knot above them, and drooping to the hills of two other doves at either side. White sweet peas and fragrant mandarin, with maiden hair ferns, were used in great profusion about the room. The front drawing room was filled with pink carnations and feathery "baby breathers," massed upon the mantel above the chandelier, and overflowing huge Indian baskets. The reception hall was pretty with dahlias and trails of pink clematis. In the back drawing room sweet peas were lavishly used. The supper was served in the brilliant room on the third floor and there were most beautifully arranged. Upon the table plate glass mirrors were effectively used, while La France roses and maiden hair ferns were strewn carelessly about them. A treize of netting caught with roses was arranged about the room, and from the chandelier, which was festooned with broad pink satin ribbons was suspended a basket overflowing with roses. The table was lighted with silver candelabra, the shades of a soft pink hue. The magnificent grounds, piazzas and porch were lighted with Japanese lanterns.
