"You sint a fireman !" ejaculated the letter, adding with a sledge-hammer emphasis as he resumed his hose, "Golly !"

Not till they descended into the street were they clear of dreamland. Then first could the mind, gradually permeated by the body's erjoyment of the sate and solid earth, make up its actual account with happiness. It was he, of course, who made the first pretence of a recovery propunding in a voice carefully modelled after his own, the original inquiry, "How are you ?"

For answer, the color slowly returned to her cheeks, and cautiously, as if fearful of rousing the jealousy of an eluded fate, she broke into a tearful smile at the singularity of her appearance leaning on the arm of a figure still dripping with water, his clothes torn and blackened with the grime of the root. Then stopping for a minute, with hands that still trembled, she put back her wandering black hair into something like presentable tidiness .- Temple Bar.

"However, whether it does or not, I want you to get out of the rut of bachelordom and go with me."

"You are very kind."

"For a verity, old man. Will you go ?" "As I said in the beginning, I now repeat, "No, sir." Bascom had been married for several years, and I had his frequent assurance that his entire married lite was nothing more or less than a path of silver sunshine through a golden garden of roses. It was a charming metaphor, but it fell upon unappreciative ears, for I knew that Bascom had written poetry in his youth, and, in addition to that, he was married, and I knew what all married men had to say to bachelors of matrimony as they had found it. It was simply sugar spread upon an un-argument, just as I always had done when 1 argued this subject with a married man, and he began to show signs of retreating. "Well, well," he said, "have it your own way. I am sure I can stand it if you can, but, say, you will join me over Sunday at my own house. I've told my wite about you, and she is so anxious to see you that she commissioned me to invite you out for Sunday."

Bachelor or no bachelor, I could no afford to be a boor, and to slight such an invitation as this was inexcusable. So I began to hedge a bit

"My dear Bascom," I said apologetically "why didn't you tell me you wanted me to

"Well, it hadn't just occurred to me, I guess," and he laughed.

"Of course," I went on, "it is quite a "Well," I replied, picking my way care-fully, "I am willing to say that as far as your houghold is concerned, the prospect is more pleasing than I thought it could be.'

"And would you say the Hilman household were any less pleasing than mine^p. This with a nudge and a chuckle that I thought quite uncalled for in view of the fact that Mrs. Hilman was a married woman, and I had no right to express undue admiration for her or her household, and which made the blood rush to my face.

"Of course, that" must be included," I said, trying to laugh off my embarrass-ment. "And still," I continued, "that is only two, and there are millions which one wouldn't care to praise."

"What are they to you ?" he retorted. "You are not hunting for the millions, but the one.

"Apparently I'm not hunting the one with a great degree of success."

"But you should now that you have had proof positive that the life is not as black as it is painted."

"It's very easy for you to talk," I con-tinued warmly. "You have called a lucky turn and so has Hilman. But you have exhausted the supply. Now, if I could get such a woman as Mrs.-" But I stopped short, for I was about to make a discrimination which was hardly complimentry to my host, and I didn't want to do that. "Go on," he urged, good naturedly. "I don't care if you do say Mrs. Hilman. Anybody could see that you had a leaning that way. Even my wife noticed it, and she wasn't at all envious of her sister."

"Very well," I submitted, "say Mrs. Hilman. If I could find such a woman as Mrs. Hilman, I an not sure that my mind would not undergo a change, and that 1 could not be persuaded to throw off a few of the trammels of bachelorhood."

Bascon let off a guffaw that not only startled me, but it shocked me as well, for I thought I had said something I should not have said.

"What's the matter, man?" I asked, much alarmed.

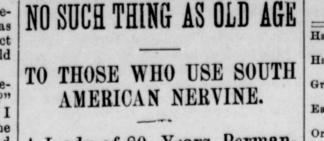

That's it, "he continued to laugh. "What's the matter with Mrs. Hilman ? ' 1 was more disturbed than ever at this queer inqui y. "What do you mean ? "I asked, taking him by the collar.

"Why, old fellow, if Mrs. Hilman is your ideal and you think you could be happy with that kind of a woman, why don't you avai! yourself of your opportunities and take Mrs. Hilman ?"

"Wha-wha-wha-why-" 1 stammered, utterly upset.

" Oh, there isn't any Mr. Hilman, if that's what you are trying to say. A L ady of 80 Years Permanently Cured.

Wordsworth speaks of "An old age serene and bright, and lovely as a Lapland night," and elsewhere this same writer talks of "An old age, beautiful and free." These are conditions that come to the man or the woman, though their years may border close on to a century, when in the en-joyment of good health. In fact it is difficult to think of some of the old men and women on the stage of today as old people, there seems to be a parennial youthfulness about their every movement and act.

Mrs. John Dinwoody has been a resident of Flesherton, Ont., for over 40 years, and there is no person in the town and country side around better known than this lady, and none more highly esteemed. Three years ago it was her sad lot to lose a daughter who had been all the world to her. The shock sustained by this event com-She doctored for one year with three doctors and they gave her case up, saying that it was one of old age, and no one, nor any medicine, could do her good. Made of the kind of stuff that gives beauty to old age at any time, she did not despair. She was influenced to try Nervine. She took three bottles, and this was sufficient to show that her end was not yet. From these she obtained relief. She persevered, and in all took twelve bottles of the medicine, with the result that she is today completely cured of that breaking up of the
