MONCTON.

April, 1,-The quiet passion week has settled down upon society, and the only event in the shape of an entertainment which I have to record this week is the sacred concert given in the Central methodist church on Monday evening when Mrs. Harrison drew, as she invariably does, a very large audience. who gave her an enthusiastic reception, and listened spell-bound to a collection of their old favorites. It is one of the peculiarties of Mrs. Harrison that she seldom varies her programmes, and therefore her audiences have the advantage of knowing just ex actly what they are going to hear, and familiarity with the different numbers increases their appreciation of them. Of course it might seem strange to those who are inclined to be critical that a singer of Mr. John C. Henry is visiting Bridgewater, Nova Mrs. Harrison's reputation, whose admirers conadmission should have been placed at the extraordinarily low figure of fifteen cents, as few singers would care to have their prestige lowered by such a price, but I understand it was done entirely from phi!anthropic reasons, in order that everyone should Mrs. Fredric T. Waite's friends will regret to have an opportunity of hearing the Canadian Nightnga'e once more, before she sailed for Europe. Ce: tainly her recital was a very great success many of her audience expressing the opinion that she had never been in better voice. Her three numbers "With Verdure Clad" "Let the Bright Seraphim" and "I Will Extol Thee" were beautifully sung and the catatrice was given encore after encore, to all of which she gracefully responded. Her "Dream of Bethlehem" with violin obligato by Miss Bruce, evoked rapturous applause, and her duet with Mr J. H. Wetmore was one of the gems of the evening. The other soloists were Mr. Paul Lea and Mr. J. H. Wetmore, who is always a favorite with Moncton audiences. Mr. Wetmore sang "Days of Days" to Miss Wetmore's accompaniment in splendid style, and Mr. Lea sang the setting of "The Lost Chord', with excellent effect the choir forming a chorus for the last verse. Mrs. Harrison's closing numbers were given by request, and consisted of "The Fairies" and the "Song of Trust." Miss Bruce played a violin sol o with taste and thil and to the regret of her audier ce, responded to a very entiusiastic encore by merely bowing. Professor J. H. Watts organist of the church played the accompaniments in his usual masterly manner, and gave Pfeiffer's dead march, in memory of the late Sir

Joseph Barnby, with great effect. Mrs. J. J. Taylor and children left town on Monday for their future home in Truro, Nova Scotia, and I believe Mr. Taylor, who has been spendthe past few days in town, will follow them this week. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor's departure will be universally regretted, as they are a serious loss to our narrowing circle, but their numerous friends will join in wishing them all happiness and prosperity in their new home. Miss Mowatt of Campbellton is spending a few days in town, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. McD. Metezler, of Bonaccord stre t.

Miss Chipman who was called home from Annap olis Royal by the death of her mother ten days ago' returned on Thursday to resume her duties as or ganist of St. Luke's church, Annapolis. Miss Chipman has the deep sympathy of her numerous friends in her sad bereavement, and is followed by the good wishes of the entire community.

Mrs. C. Sayre of Spencer's Island is spending a few days in town visiting friends.

The many friends of Mr. J. C Beatty heard with deep regret of his death which occurred at his residence on Main street on Thursday evening of consumptton. Mr. Beatty had been in failing health for some years past, but was alle to be out and about until two months ago, when a sudden cold prostrated him, and resulted in his death. He leaves a widow and one little daughter who will have the sympathy of the community in their sad loss. The funeral took p'ace on Monday afternoon from the res dence on Main street to the rural cemetery, a large number of friends being present amongst whom were several from Hillsboro, Mr Beatty's native place. The floral efferings were very beautiful, a cross from Dr. and Mrs. F. A. McCully being conspicuous for its beauty. The services were conducted by Rev. John Head of Wesley memorial church, the pull because memorial church, the pall bearers were Messrs J S. Marine, S. C. Wilbur, W. E. Calhoun, J. M. S. Marine, S. C. Wilbur, W. E. Calhoun, J. M. PEN SKETCH OF A DUKE.

Leader in Politics and Known in the

"What I most like about the Duke of Devonshire," a foreign diplomat in London is quoted as having said once, "is his yoube-damnedness."

The Duke is the personification of the aristocratic instinct which distinguishes the English national character.

He has only been a Duke for a few years his father, the seventh Duke, dying in December, 1891, at the age of eighty-three. The present Duke of Devonshire made his enviable political record as the Marquis of Hartington, a courtesy title, and he has been married less than five years, though he is sixty-two years old. There were two reasons for his remaining a bachelor so long. In the first place the seventh Duke of Manchester, who married the beautiful Countess Louise, daughter of Count Alter, cidn't die until 1890, and. in the second place, the old Duke of Devonshire, who objected the Marquis taking a bride of sixty, though he had waited for her many decades, lived a year and a balf longer. Finally all obstacles were removed, however, and the marriage took place, netwithstanding the old Duke of Manchester's will was specially drawn to prevent it. This romantic affection was so far recognized by friends that for many years prior to the marriage no house party to which either went was considered complete without the other. Like Joseph Chamberlain, the present Duke of Devonshire formerly was a sturdy Liberal-indeed, when Gladstone retired from public life in a fit of the sulks, just twenty years ago, the Duke (then Marquis, and a member of the House of Commons) was unanimously chosen leader of the Liberal party. When Gladstone got over his pet, Hartington was the first to welcome him, and became once more his loyal lieutenant. Like Mr. Chamberlain also, he deserted Gladstone when the latter took up Home Rule. The Duke now is leader of the Liberal Unionists in the House of Lords, as Mr. Chamberlain is in the House of Commons.

The Duke is pious in his way, but loves all kinds of sports. He often leaves Parlisment during sittings to attend service in Westminster Abbey, but is as wellknown on the turf as in the sanctuary. He is fond of good eating and drinking, and is credited with getting as much er joyment in life as most men, yet is always governed by a sense of duty.
