Bottlebinding.

You can't judge of the quality of a book by the binding, nor tell the contents by the title. You look for the name of the author before you buy the book. The name of Robert Louis Stevenson (for instance) on the back guarantees the inside of the book, whatever the outside may be.

There's a parallel between books and bottles. The binding or wrapper of a bottle is no guide to the quality of the medicine the bottle contains. The title on the bottle is no warrant for confidence in the contents. It all depends on the author's name. Never mind who made the bottle. Who made the medicine? That's the question.

Think of this when buying Sarsaparilla. It isn't the binding of the bottle or the name of the medicine that you're to go by. That's only printer's ink and paper! The question is, who made the medicine? What's the author's name? When you see Ayer's name on a Sarsaparilla bottle, that's enough. The name Ayer guarantees the best, and has done so for 50 years.

The many friends of Mr. McKenzie Y. Stewart heard with very deep regret of his death which took place on Monday evening at his home on Highfield street. Mr. Stewart had been in failing health for many months a sufferer from consump tion, so his death was not unexpected, though it was scarcely a less severe blow to his widowed mother on that account. The deceased youth was a brother of Mr. D. st. wart of the I. C. Mili ary Service, French and German. In Germany, military service is not popular, though it is no doubt endured with resignation by all, and, also, though the vast majority of the nation is proud of the army. No one professes to enjoy the two years with the colors, or to regard it as of the service, take the number of suicides people are no more disciplined from suicide than are the Germans, there we believe, far less inclination shown by the soldiers to escape the miseries of barrack life by suicide. Of course the French peasant or the French bourgeois dislikes leaving home, but when he is once in the barracks he finds his existence not to disagreeable. Life there is. indeed, not unlike public school life of a rough kind, and the man whose triend can manage to let him have a few francs to spend every week can be perfectly happy, while those who are richer and have an ailowance often "do themselves" extremely well, to use the slang ph ase of the day. Go to a Parisian restaurant and watch a party of five or six young privates diving together at a table by themselves. They behave almost exactly like under graduates, and hurry off at the end just like men in college who have to be back by a certain hour. Another fact which mitigates the severity and strain of army service in France is that the army is very popular with a nation so full of military patriotism as the French. All classesrich and poor, radical and reactionary, and even the socialists-love the army, and with suspicion and hatred. They may not dislike the private soldier, but look on him as a man condemed to misery, possibly to the shame of having to shoot down his own fellow-citizens .- From the Spectator.

His Complimentito Chopin.

A senator's wife, who is an accomplished musician, gave a dinner party recently. Among the guests was a certain member of the Kentucky delegation in congress. While awaiting announcement of dinner, at the urgent request of some of the guests, the hostess played and sang. She had just finished a polonaise by Chopin, which was greeted with a burst of applause, and as she rose from the piano, in the silence which followed the sweet strains, her husband turned to the gentleman from the blue grass state with.

"Would you like a sonata before dinner, colonel ?"

"Well, I don't mind," promptly replied the Kentucky sta'esman, bracing up quickly. "I had two on my way here, but I reckon I can stand another."-New York Tribune.
