The many friends of Captain Melvin were saddened and shocked on Tuesday morning when they learned of his sad death from drowning when returning from an outing down the bay in the steam yacht Annie. The tide was low in the rier when the party returned at eleven o'clock, and they were obliged to land on the steamer Arbutus, before reaching the wharf. It is thought in the darkness. and eagerness to land after a king day spent on the water, that the captain made a misstep and fell into the water. He was not missed at first, when suddenly some one inquired for him, search was made but it was soon found the captain had not come on shore. On Tuesday his body was found on the flats a short distance from where it is supposed he was drowned. He was married to Miss Ada A. Clerke, ster of Mr. C. H. Clerke to whom much sympath is given by all in her great sorrow and siliction The funeral services will be held from his late residence on Union street at half past two o'clock to morrow afternoon. Captain Melvin was highly esteemed and respected. He was a generous hearted, kindly gentleman, and his friends one and all most sadly regret his untime y end.
