Social and Personal.

As announced last week the Ethel Tucker company began a week's engagement on Monday and the unusually large patronage that has been extended is the best guarantee of the excellent work they have done and the reputation they have established in this city. Of Miss Tucker it is only necessary to repeat what has already been said in these columns, that as an emotional actress she has had no superiors, and few equals, in this city. She costumed her parts magnificently, and so great a favorite has she become here that her every appearance is greeted in a most flattering manner. Mr. Meidon was seen at his best on Thursday evening as Victor Blanchard, in Lynwood and his interpretation of the character was grand. Miss Lillian Tucker who is a sister of Miss Ethel Tucker, is a new member of the company, who has become a great favorite during the week, her bright, clever impersonations entitling her to the applause and commendation that is bestowed upon her. Dainty and pretty little Miss Westcott continues in the affections of St. John theatre goers and her specialties are full of a grace and chic that is very pleasing. Miss Harmon and Miss Kendrick are both excellent in the various roles assigned to them, and the male element of the company leaves little to be desired. Miss Tucker and her company goes from here to Yarmouth where they will undoubtedly be warmly welcomed. Miss Tucker hopes to return here next season, a fact which theatre goers will hear with much pleasure.
