VERSES OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY

The Land of the Last Good Bye.

A border land, a sad voiced sea: Breaking along the shore,

Dead leaves strewing a wintry lea,

Night winds of never more. There where the roiling billows swell,

Under a darkened sky,

And ever tolling, a passing bell,

Is the land of the last good bye.

The foot prints down to the lonely deep. Are more than the days and years; More than the stars are those who weep.

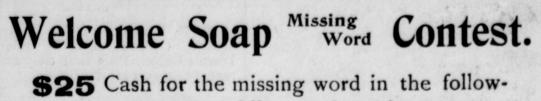

And the sea is a sea of tears. Every wave is a breaking heart, With a monrnful parting cry,

Ever the beautiful dead depart In the land of the last good bye.

What millions of days since life began,

And death on the earth walked free; Man has followed his brother man, Of high and of low degree. Followed him home with chant and psalm, Knowing that all must die: Halting under the elm palm, In the land of the last good bye. Ever the beautiful and the best, The loveliest of the young, Abide their briefly in saintly rest, While a parting hymn is sung. And where all ages are gathered in, As fast as the moments fly; Crowned with the love we hope to win, Is the land of the last good bye. The trees are hung with the harps of time, Swept by the dreamful air; Catching the strains of love's home clime, Where millions have knelt in prayer Where never without a weeping band, And a broken hearted sigh ;

On the shore where countless mourners stand, Is the land of the last good bye. Fair hands folded and fond eyes sealed, Sealed in redeeming grace; Witness the paradise life sealed, Lighting a blessed face. Saints to a holier will resigned. In heavenly stillness lie;

There where the peace of the Lord they find, Is the land of the last good bye.

O ye who seek that sombre place, My sleep by that surging sea. The snow blown over the mortal face, Will be but a sign of me. Call to me over the misty waves, And listen their true reply :

We leave but dust in our quiet graves, In the land of the last good bye. CYPRUS GOLDE,

Horizon Hill, Oct. 1897.

Coming Back.

They say if our beloved dead, Should seek the old familiar place; Some stranger would be there instead, And they would find no welcome face.

I cannot tell how this might be In other homes-but this I know Could my lost darling come to me. That she, would never find it so.

Twelve times the flowers, have come and gone Twelve times the winter winds have blown; The while, her peaceful rest went on, And I have learned to live alone.

I hide her memory in my heart.

She still will find her empty chair,

Fond, faith 'ul love, has blessed my way, And friends are round me t us and tried; They have their place, but hers to-day Is empty as the day she died.

How would I spring with bated breath, And joy too deep for word or sign, To take my darling home from death. And once again to call her mine.

It fills my heart wifh vague unrest; Where yonder cold white marble gleams,

God knows best but, those who say Our best beloved would find no place. Have never hungered every day,

Dreaming of Home.

It comes to me often in silence. When the firelight sputters low-When the black uncertain shadows Seem wraiths of the long ago;

Have slowly learned from day to day, In all life's tasks to bear my part; But whether grave or whether gay,

And if my darling comes to share, My pleasant fireside warm and bright; Where it has waited day and night.

I dare not dream the blissful dream She still must slumber best.

Through years and years, for one sweet face.

Mrs. F. W. Sumner, Miss Sumner and Master | and Lo! Hear the Gentle Lark, with flute obligato

The great musical features of the week was the concert in Centenary church at which Mrs. Marie Harrison was the bright particular star. She never sang better than on that evening, being in capital voice and form. Her numbers were Gounod's Ave Marie with violin obligato by Morton Harrison, a selection from Haydn's Creation.

Always with a throb of heartache That thrills each pulsive vein, Comes the old, unquiet longing, For the peace of home again.

I'm sick of the roar of cities, And of faces cold and strange; I know where there's warmth of welcome. And my yearning fancies range Back to the dear old homestead, With an aching sense of pain, But there'll be joy in the coming, When I go home again.

When I go home again! there's music That never may die away, And it seems the hand of angels, On a mystic harp, at play, Have touched with a yearning sadness On a beautiful broken strain, To which is my fond heart wording-When I go home again.
