A minstrel entertainment given by some young society ladies and gentlemen of Calais is a new feature of amusement that the St. Croix public will be invited to patronize at an early date. It is under the management of Miss Ella Harmon, and is given for the benefit of one of the Calais churches to increase a repair fund. A very pleasant dance was enjoyed by a large party of young people in the grant army Hall, Calais last evening. On Sunday afternoon the friends of Mr. Ernest T. Lee were horrified to hear that he had been sudden. ly hurt at a fire while trying to extinguish the blaze with a chemical fire extinguisher. Mr. Lee was assistant fire engineer of the city of Calais, and was always most energetic at the time of fires, and when the alarm was sounded by some mismanagement, or defect in the extinguisher, it exploded, and fatally injured him in the head; he was conveyed home but only lived until four o'clock the next morning. Mr. Lee was one of the most prominent business, and society men in Calais, he was popular with all classes and had held many positions of trust both in public and private aff .irs. He married Miss Annie Washburn whom he leaves with his mother Mrs. Lee to mourn his loss. The funeral services were held from his late residence on Swan street, yesterday afternoon at two o'clock and was largely attended, several secret sccieties of which he was a member walked in the procession. Rev. Dr. Padelforde of the baptist church conducted the funeral serv.ces. The floral tribates were beautiful and appropriate sent by sympathizing and grief stricken friends, and to Mrs. Lee and his family there go s out from all a most spontaneous and sincere feeling of sympathy in their sorrow.

My German Maid.

We crossed the seas from Fatherland, My German maid and I, The clung to me as clings the vine, That grows beside our native Rhine. Her look was holy, pure, divine, As aught beneath the sky.

For me she left her childhood's home, My gentle German bride. And ne'er while Berthold's arm can stay The tide of sorrow from her way, Shall Hildegarde regret the day, That bore us o'er the tide.

Right well I mind that happy day, When first her love I knew. We roamed to gether hand in hand, The vineclad hills of Fatherland. And while their purple summits stand, To her I will be trae.

Husband and friend, and lover too, The three in one am I.
To her who claims my fondest care,
Who all my burdens fain would share, For her is breathe i my warmest prayer To Him who reigns on high.

And when our days on earth are past, May we together rest Where love's undimmed by sorrow's tear. And hope can smile without a fear, Our vanished youth once more appear, In the City of the Blest.

There never was and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all the ills to which the flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and indifferently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient what would relieve one ill, in turn, would aggravate the other We have, however in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use, the frailest systems are led into convelence and street, when est systems are led into convalescence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance results, improved appetite. Many who have died of consumption dated their troubles from exposure, followed by a cold which settled on their lungs, and in a short time they were beyond the skill of the best physician. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been spared. This medicine has no equal for curing coughs, colds and all affections of the throat and lungs.

I am now nearly well, and believe they wil. cure me. I would not be without them for any money."
