DOWN IN A SEWER.

The Brave Deed and the way in which it was Awarded.

To pick out the bravest and self-sacrificing deed that has been done within twelve months is no easy task. This, however, is what the Royal Humane Society of England has to do every year before awarding the Stanhope Medal. Few would question the justice of the award that was made in 1894. The medal of that year went to a Cornish sewer foreman, William Mugford by name. In darkness and sudden danger he performed the act that justly won him distinction.

Torquay a favorite winter resort on the south coast of England, had employed a gang of men to work in the town sewer. Mugford was the foreman of the gang, and on a certain day in October he was working with his men in the drain when the water began to rise.

Mugford realized the danger, and at once ordered his men up, but the water was too quick for them. A heavy storm of rain had come on. Three men started for the manhole, the foreman remaining behind to secure the staging on which they had been at work. Before he could reach it the flood came down with a wild rush.

One man was dragged into safety by means of a life-line, but another was carried away and drowned. A man named Milton was thrown down, and would have been drowned had not Mugford come along. The foreman had retained his calmness during all the confusion and horror of the moment. He was possessed of exceptional strength, and after a short struggle he succeeded in half-dragging, half-carrying the man to the staging.

Further up the drain was another workman, struggling desperately against the flood. The water was rising higher and running with ever increasing velocity, and the horrors of the sewer were augmented by the knowledge that the outlet was directly into the sea on a rocky coast.

In spite of this knowledge, Mugford once more left his place of comparative safety upon the staging and went further into the drain to assist the struggling workman. After an exhausting battle with the flood he got him to the staging, and then completed his task by helping the two men to climb by means of foot irons and chains to the upper part of the stage, where for seven weary hours they lay and waited for the flood to exhaust itself.

Only those who know the horrors of darkness in the slimy depths of a sewer, with the rushing sound of water filling all the space, can appreciate the heroism of the man who twice plunged into the flood to rescue the men under his charge.

PIGMIES OF AFRICA.

These Little People and Some of Their Strange Characteristics.

Herodotus records the existence of pigmies in Africa—a nation of little men who wore garments made of palm leaves. Hundreds of years after the Father of History wrote, Stanley saw them in the gloom of a Central African forest, and held an interview with one of their princes. Later, Captain Burrows, of the Kongo Free State, came across these little freaks more than once, and in his book, "The Land of the Pigmies," he describes their make and manner.

The pigmies' height brings them to the shoulder of a man of average stature, although some of them stand no higher than his chest. There are black pigmies and red pigmies. The bodies of the red pigmies are not so hairy as those of negroes, but the black bodies are covered with down. Although a well proportioned race, they are socially inferior to other tribes. They are nomads by nature and wander from place to place, supporting themselves by hunting. One place seems to be as much a home to them as another if it is good hunting ground.

Their revengeful nature and their hardihood in war cause them to be feared. They will lie and deceive, but they will not steal.

The pigmy is an excellent archer. He will shoot three or four arrows, one after the other, with such rapidity that the last will have left the bow before the first has reached its goal. When an arrow misses its mark, the pigmy flies into a violent passion, breaking his bow and arrows in his rage. When it hits, he pats his left arm with his right hand and chuckles.

A certain chief of the Momvus was big, and so corpulent that he had to be carried about in a litter borne by four men. On a certain occasion he was going with his warriors to fight a neighboring chief, for he always accompanied a fighting expedition and directed its attacks from his litter.

His wife, a massive matron, was in the litter with him. As they passed an invisible pigmy encampment whose inhabitants he had offended, a flight of arrows from a concealed foe caused the chief and his wife to drop back from their sitting posture and turn over on their faces.

A pigmy darted out from behind a tiny bush, shot off two arrows, hit both the chief and his wife, and then, uttering a cry of gratification and patting his right arm with his left hand, disappeared behind the bush.

The pigmies take up their abode near the village of a big chief, where banana plantations abound, from which they may glean when they please. They have two methods of gleanings. One is as follows:

A pigmy will mark out a bunch of bananas in a plantation by shooting an arrow into the stalk. The arrow signifies that the pigmy desires that particular bunch when it is sufficiently ripe. The owner of the plantation stands in such fear of the pigmy's vengeance that he never dreams of removing the fruit or the arrow, but leaves both to be claimed by the awe-inspiring dwarf.

By the other method the pigmy buys the bananas, he fixing the price and paying for it in that which his fat makes currency. On returning home from a day's hunting, with several pieces of meat wrapped in grass or leaves, he goes to a plantation, selects several bunches of bananas, shins up the tree, cuts off the bunches, and in payment affixes one of the small packets of meat to the stem by a wooden skewer. He has not stolen the bananas—he has bought them. His is "the good old rule" on which Rob Roy acted.

The simple plan, That they should take who have the power, And they should keep who can.

The pigmy's appetite for bananas is such that he will eat sixty at a meal. Then he will lie and groan throughout the night, but when morning comes he is ready to repeat the meal.

"Yes," said a pigmy to Captain Burrows, when he expressed surprise at the dwarf's appetite, "there were a few bananas there on a bunch, and I ate them. I suppose that is what they were there for. I should like some more."

Strangers passing through the bush are fair game to the pigmies, who are cunning in the art of compelling a man to make a target of himself. The pigmy fastens a cord to his foot and affixes the other end to the bough of a tree that stretches across the forest path. Concealed a few yards off, the pigmy waits till he hears some one coming; then he gently pulls the string so as to shake the bough. The stranger stops to watch the moving branch, and is shot in the back by the pigmy.

"But," said a pigmy, when rebuked by Captain Burrows for such treachery, "he was a stranger. He had no business to be there." It is the old story told in one of Leech's pictures in "Punch": "A stranger! 'Eave 'arf a brick at 'im!"

"LIT COLN THE MERCIFUL"

The way in which His Kindliness Saved a man.

A characteristic story of Lincoln's kindly interference in behalf of young men who had rendered themselves amenable to the law, but in whose case there was reason to hope for reformation, is told in the Portland Oregonian by Mr. J. B. Montgomery, who was a witness to the circumstances.

One Michael Lehm, of Williamsport, Pennsylvania, had a contract for carrying the mail from the railroad station. He was the personification of integrity, but his son, Michael, Jr., sixteen years old, who drove the mail-wagon, was induced by evil associates to take a letter from the mail-bag and was detected in the act of removing a check from it. He was sentenced to imprisonment.

Great sympathy was felt with the father, and a delegation of citizens, headed by Judge Hale, a member of Congress, including Mr. Montgomery, and accompanied by the elder Lehm, went to Washington to see the President. Mr. Montgomery tells what followed:

"As we entered the executive chamber, President Lincoln came sauntering in. He had on a faded and much worn dressing gown. His slippers were run down at the heel. The President, as soon as we were seated, said:

"Well, gentlemen, what is it you want?" Judge Hale handed him the petition. He scanned it carefully, names and all, and possessed himself of all the circumstances. He then said to Judge Hale:

"Judge, can I do so and so?" stating a legal proposition as to his power to do a certain thing. Judge Hale, after a moment's reflection, replied:

"Mr. President, I don't think you can." "Lincoln then said, 'I know I cannot, but I want to see if you know. But,' he went on, 'I can do something else.'"

"He was sitting by his desk, and every one except this man, who 'swallowed all formulas,' would have written on it; but he twisted his two long legs together like a whiplash, placed the petition on his knee and wrote these words, as near as I can recollect:

"To the United States District Attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania. You are hereby directed to enter a nolle prosequi in the case of the United States vs. Michael Lehm, Jr., in consideration that the said Michael Lehm, Jr., enlisted in the army of the United States and served three years, unless sooner honorably discharged."

A. LINCOLN.
"What do you think of that?" he said, handing it to Judge Hale. It was all that was wanted.

"Lincoln got up out of his chair, shook hands with us all, telling us 'A dozen senators are waiting outside to see me, but this gives me more pleasure than talking to them about offices. Then, holding Lehm by the hand, he said:

"Tell your son never to be tempted again, to be a good soldier, and how happy it has made me to get him out of his scrape."

The old Dutchman who was short and fat, made a pathetic figure. He was beyond the ability to express himself or even to weep. He stood silent his eyes almost bulging out of his head. His boy was saved.

Cheated the Thief.

I have an old collie dog called Don (writes a correspondent) who is no longer very active, but his intelligence is as keen as ever. He has lately been annoyed by a neighbor's dog, who is too lazy to bury bones for himself, but is quite ready to take the trouble of digging up other people's treasures. Don, having been cheated out of several choice hoarded morsels in this way, meditated over the business for some time until a bright idea struck him.

One day, after day, the neighbor's dog being out of the way, Don began digging a hole not very far from where I sat watching him. I observed that he dug the hole unusually deep, and in it he put a large and highly desirable bone. Then he covered it well with earth, disappeared for a few minutes, and came back with a mean little bone, which had already seen its best days, but was still good enough, as Don evidently thought, for a thief. This bone he carefully laid on the earth which concealed the big one, and he spread the earth over it with great industry and artfulness.

I was interested enough in this clever trick to watch results, and had the pleasure of seeing that it was completely successful. Very early the next morning the thief seized what he thought an opportune moment, dug up the worthless bone and ran away with it; and later in the day Don came down leisurely, and reaped his reward as he sat comfortably crunching the large juicy bone.

THINGS OF VALUE.

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for the ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of man's curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound undiluted state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use, the frailties of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquillizing the nervous system, and restoring refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, being stimulating, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the animal function of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto, have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, gauged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

Among the coachesmen in Berlin are seven retired army officers three ex-pastors and sixteen nobles. Manohla traces its origin from Manito, the Indian appellation of "the Great Spirit."

Cholera morbus, cramps and kindred complaints annually make their appearance at the same time as the hot weather, green fruit, cucumbers, melons, etc., and many persons are debilitated from eating these tempting fruits, but they need not abstain if they have Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and take a few drops in water. It cures the cramps and cholera in a remarkable manner, and is sure to check every disturbance of the bowels.

The self-made man always reaches the period in life when he discovers that he left a flaw in his superstructure.

He Has Tried It—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eucalyptic Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years, and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

New Guinea is considered by the German naturalist, Dr. Schomburgk, the richest of tropical islands. Russia exports more than 1,500,000 eggs every year.

THEY ARE CAREFULLY PREPARED.—Pills which dissipate themselves in the stomach cannot be expected to have much effect upon the intestines, and to overcome constipation the medicine administered must influence the action of these canals. Farme's Vegetable Pills are so made, under the supervision of experts, that the substance in them intended to operate on the intestines are retarded in action until they pass through the stomach to the bowels.

One apple orchard in Greenwood, I was, contains 800 acres and 133,000 trees.

A SMALL PILL BUT POWERFUL.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by its size would consider Farme's Vegetable Pills to be flacking. It is a little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The remedies which it carries are put up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

The queen of Sweden is probably the most charitable of the royal ladies of Europe. It is said that she devotes almost the whole of her large fortune to works of benevolence.

BLOODLESSNESS,

Or as Doctors Say "Anæmia" is Cured By
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

An anæmic person is usually weak, listless and pale. He gets out of breath on slight exertion, the pulse is rapid and weak and the sleep frequently disturbed. The feet and hands are cold, ankles swollen at night and there is puffiness under the eyes in the morning.

Since the cause of anæmia is lack of a sufficient quantity of red blood corpuscles in the blood, a cure can only be effected by a treatment which will increase the number of red corpuscles and so improve the quality of the blood.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Contains the very elements which are found lacking in the blood of an anæmic person. It creates new red corpuscles and on this account has proved wonderfully successful as a positive cure for pale, weak, men and women suffering the ills of poor blood and exhausted nerves, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or EDMANSON, BATES & CO., Toronto.
