BACKACHE.

The Unmistakable Symptoms of Kidney Disease Can Only Be Permanently Cured When the Kidneys Are Made Well By Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Your back is tired. It aches with every little exertion. You think there is nothing serious the matter. "It will wear away," you say, and you try and forget your suffering. But you can't. The aching is growing worse. What can be the matter? Don't blame the back. It's the kidneys that are to blame. It's when the kidneys are wrong that the back tires easily and aches. Don't waste time with plasters and liniments. They can never cure backache because they don't remove the cause—disease of the kidneys.

Doctor the kidneys. Strengthen and invigorate them by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Then there will be no backache, no painful urination, no getting up in the night, no danger of Bright's disease, diabetes and dropsy.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act directly on the kidney and liver. They make the bowels regular and active, and entirely remove every symptom of kidney disease. They are the world's greatest kidney cure and have the largest sale of any pill in Canada. The reason is not far to seek. They cure where other remedies fail. Here is an example:

Mr. B. Clement, 265 St. Lawrence street, Montreal, states: "For a long time I was a sufferer with backache and kidney disease. After doctoring for six months and trying many remedies without experiencing relief, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. I took two boxes of them, and since then have not had a pain in my back, loins or sides, and consider myself entirely cured."

Scores of thousands have been cured of backache and kidney disease by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers; or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Toronto.

For cold in the head and catarrh, use Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. For throat and liver troubles, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Fowler, of Hampton, are in the city the guests of Mrs. J. B. Taylor Main street.

Judge Wells returned yesterday afternoon from Boston where he went to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Gay formerly Miss Fanning.

VISITING VICTORIA LAND.

Experience of the Southern Cross on Her Recent Successful Journey.

The successful voyage of the steamer Southern Cross from Hobart, Tasmania, to Victoria Land, and in the Antarctic regions, and her return to Australia was announced several months ago. It is the second time that a steamship has visited that land mass, the nearest point to the South Pole yet attained since Ross discovered it in the sailing vessels Erebus and Terror, some fifty years ago. It is now conclusively proven that steam vessels fitted for polar navigation can penetrate far south in Antarctic waters, though the ice is very formidable and the storms are most terrific. So far as we know, any accurate vessel may reach Victoria Land in any year, for the only attempts that have been made in steamships have succeeded. Those far southern waters are still so little known that the experiences of the Southern Cross, as told in the latest number of Petermann's Mittheilungen, have considerable novelty and interest.

The Southern Cross is Sir G. Newnes's steamer that took the Antarctic exploring party under command of M. Borchgrevink to Cape Adare, Victoria Land, which is its base of operations during the South polar work now in progress. The vessel left Hobart on Dec. 19, last year, and steamed straight for its destination till it reached the pack ice, about twelve hundred miles a little east of south of Hobart. It had been under way eleven days and had reached 61° 30' latitude.

The pack ice was encountered a little earlier than was expected, and most of the expedition who had never seen the polar pack were filled with wonder as they looked over the ice expanse. The ice was from four to eight feet thick, and some of the does several miles in diameter. Into this formidable obstruction, that would have crushed an ordinary vessel, the Southern Cross forced its way, and soon was fast in the ice. Then followed days of great anxiety, for the pressure was very severe. Great blocks of ice, forced into the air by the strain, were piled up around the steamer as high as the bowsprit, and the pressure lifted the vessel four feet out of the water. There were days, however, when the ice loosened and the vessel was able to make headway, and after twenty three days in the pack the Southern Cross reached the Balleny Islands, discovered by the explorer of the name in 1838. It had been a hard tussle, and Cape Adare was still 300 miles away.

A more frightfully desolate coast than that of the Balleny Islands wallied in by great blocks of ice, could hardly be conceived. But the remarkable beauty of the scene when the low-hanging sun lit up every tip of the ice peaks and gave the whole white surface the sparkling brilliancy of diamonds compensated for all the anxiety of the days in the pack. It was a harvest time also for the scientific staff, and particularly for the zoologists, who prepared 175 bird skins, discovered a new variety of the sea lion and collected penguin and the beautiful white stormy petrel. Several hundred varieties of animal life were secured and other members of the party were busy taking photographs, deep-sea temperatures and making meteorological and magnetic observations.

Forty-three days had passed and the vessel was still far from Cape Adare. Desperate efforts were then made to get north again into open water, and in four days the vessel was out of the pack, but the danger was not past. The sea was very rough and filled with immense blocks of ice that were hurled against the ship's sides, and after every impact the mainmast would tremble for several seconds. The purpose of leaving the pack was to follow the edge of the ice to the east in the hope of finding an opening that would make possible an easier passage to the south. This search was successful and in a few days the Southern Cross was steaming through a comparatively open passage and on Feb. 16, this year, after a journey from Hobart of fifty-eight days, the expedition saw Cape Adare before it. A frightful storm was raging, rain and snow fell in blinding quantity and the deck and rigging were covered with ice. The vessel had to lie too far out from land, and another day elapsed before it was able to enter Robertson Bay, where it came to anchor in sixty feet of water. There was a great crowd on the beach to witness the arrival, the spectators comprising thousands of sea gulls, penguins, stormy petrels and sea lions.

Then came the hard work of unloading the vessel which lay sixty feet from the shore. It was necessary to discharge the cargo slowly into small boats which took their loads almost to the shore, but dared not venture up to it for the waves were rolling. Men stood waist deep in the icy water and floundered through it to the beach with heavy loads on their backs. It was trying work, but all went well. The provisions, scientific instruments, sledges and seventy-five dogs were safely landed, the winter huts were erected and as the Southern Cross turned her brow toward civilization the explorers were preparing to spend the second winter that human beings have passed in the Antarctic regions.

THINGS OF VALUE.

'No,' said the great author regretfully; 'I have not reached the pinnacle of success yet. No one has yet accused me of plagiarizing a long forgotten work.'

Auntie—What! You don't mean to say all those boys are waiting to take you to school? Elsie—Oh, no! One of them don't go to our school.

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for the ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of man, his various organs being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound undiluted state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use, the frailties of the system are invigorated and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the animal function of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result—strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result improved appetite, Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, gauged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

Editor—Well, young woman, if the story suits me, I will pay you $15 for it.

Young Lady Author (persuasively)—Oh, come, now. Buy it without reading it, and I'll let you have it for $10.

Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping, &c. These persons are not aware that they can induce their hearts content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

Head Waiter—Shall I send a waiter to wait on you, sir?

Guest, who has been waiting in vain for 30 minutes.—I am compelled to request this extreme privilege even though I know it disturbs your system.

Tell the Deaf.—Mr. J. F. Kellogg, Druggist, Perth, writes:—"A customer of mine having been cured of deafness by the use of Dr. Throat's Eucalyptic Oil, wrote to Ireland, telling his friends there of the cure." In consequence I received an order to send him a dozen by express to Wexford, Ireland, this week."

Little Willie—Say, pa, what's a redundancy of expression?

Father—Using more words than are necessary to express one's meaning, such as 'wealthy iceman', 'we lthy plumber', etc.

Good Digestion Should Wait on Appetite.—To have the stomach well is to have the nervous system well. Very delicate are the digestive organs. In some so sensitive are they that atmospheric changes affect them. When they become disarranged no better regulator is procurable than Parme's Vegetable Pills. They will assist the digestion so that the hearty eater will suffer no inconvenience and will derive all the benefits of his food.

Phrenologist, delightedly—My friend you were born to command. Are you a soldier?

Dignified Stranger—No, nor. O'm a janitor.

A Pill for Generous Eaters.—There are many persons of healthy appetite and poor digestion who, such a hearty meal, are subject to much suffering. The food of which they have partaken lies lead in their stomachs. Headache, depression, a smothering feeling follow. One so afflicted is unfit for business or work of any kind. In this condition Parme's Vegetable Pills will bring relief. They will assist the assimilation of the aliment, and used according to direction will restore healthy digestion.

Mr. Stubbs, reading—"The sturdy Boers slept on their arms."

Mrs. Stubbs—How injurious, John. They should sleep on their right side.

Margaret—What am I to do when they both say they love me?

Dolly—Marry the man you feel the least pity for, dear.

She—Mr. Shadows, the spiritualist, seems to be very ardent in his belief.

He—Well, why shouldn't he be? Lots of men I know are believers in ardent spirits.

New York Millionaires.

Only a few people reading advertisements of bankers and brokers, saying that money could be made through speculation, realize that the richest men in America have commenced life in a humble way and have made their fortune through stock exchange speculations.

Men like Jay Gould who worked as a dry goods clerk in a small town at $10.00 a week up to his twentieth year, and commenced to operate with his small saving of $200.00 in Wall Street left at his death 70 millions of dollars; Russell Sage who worked as a grocery boy at $4.00 per week and whose present wealth is estimated at 100 millions of dollars is still operating the market, although 80 years of age, and so are thousands of others who are enjoying all the luxuries life can offer, which is due to their success in speculations.

To the shrewd speculator the same opportunities are open to-day as to others in the past. The smallest lot which can be bought and sold is 10 shares on 5% margin, making 30 dollars.

Anybody interested as to how speculations are conducted can get information and market letter free of charge upon application by letter to,
