GOSPIF OF LONDON.

We are back in London, leaving with regret the lovely Isle, the boats, the people and most of all the dolce far niente behind us London—that is, the part we frequent—is empty. The shops are being done up, and the shop assistants are having their well earned holiday. And it is still hot. We who don't care whether or not we are seen in town out of season spend hours in the Park, a drive to Richmond and do many other unfashionable things; and are appreciating what a friend called "the delightful empty time of London."

Even at Cowes the heat was uncomfortable. Our sovereign felt it very much although she did her duties unflinchingly, going to Carisbrooke for an open-air fête in aid of a church restoration. And with her went no end of royal children and grandchildren.

The Queen is deeply interested in every thing relating to Carisbrooke. All the tender associations of Charles First's lovely daughter Elizabeth, who shared her father's imprisonment here, and here she died, abound at Carisbrooke. Besides, the Princess Beatrice succeeded her husband as Governor of the Isle of Wight, and has special interest in the lovely ruined castle. In spite of the heat the Queen looked very well, and wore a mantle of pale gray. I never remember having heard of or seen the Queen in anything except black and white. No doubt the heat made a black mantle seem impossible.

Before this reaches you the court will have moved to Balmoral, where peace and quiet will reign, as the Emperor William's visit will be made at Windsor. The Queen has set the later days of November for the visit. Not for years has the Emperor been in England. In spite of the newspaper contradiction, there has been a very decided coolness among the family; but now peace seems to have been restored, as the Emperor has written his august grandsons that he will be pleased to come at a season convenient to her, and in the same letter regrets that she has not paid him a visit, either at Potsdam or Coblenz, as she promised, as long ago as 1891, when he was last at Windsor. So, Her Majesty, not to be outdone, has said that she, too, regrets that she has never paid her Emperor grandson a visit, but will try to do so if ever again she is in Germany. William II is a "touchy" relative, and has to be handled with great care, as if his temper were as delicate and fragile as some of the old Berlin china. He is evidently meaning to this year play the role of devoted relative, having just made his mother a visit at Cronberg, which is said to have "come off quite successful and without a hitch" and he has continued to be gracious to the Princess Sophie, Crown Princess of Greece, who is again with her mother, and he visited his cousin, the Grand Duke of Hesse. And his amiability is so he still further shown when he is in England by paying a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales. This will prove a little trying to everyone's nerves as the Emperor and his uncle do not hit it off very well; and the visit has fortunately been arranged for the last of his sojourn in England. Sandringham for a few days, and returning to Germany. One sees the Prince's own clever hand in the plan! The Prince in the meantime is at Marienbad where Princess Louise joined him, and where the routine is followed. The only change observed in these places is the list of guests. One year "the lion" is an Austrian Archduke, another year a Russian Grand Duke and another His Royal Highness from England, and so on through the countries and the years together. Of course the women one hears about are well dressed; why not? With plenty of money and opportunity for display, gowns are easy to acquire and equally easy to wear. One of the ladies whose names was scratched by the Duke of Richmond is at Marienbad Luray, which would savor or gossip.

The Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria were to be at Bayreuth for the final performances of the Wagner festival, which has been a great financial and artistic success. Although there is discord among the Wagner worshippers over the leadership by Siegfried Wagner of the whole cycle of the ring, and a rival establishment is threatened, the theatre to be on the Lake of Geneva. When the festival was first carried on the singers were not paid for their services, but now, however, they are paid, but I hardly think full London season opera prices.

After Bayreuth the Princesses are going to Denmark, where they will probably stay until November, no doubt coming home in time to keep the Prince's birthday, on November 9. Although the years are multiplying, and being still Prince of Wales at 68, must try even the most devoted of sons!

Princess Maud came to London to meet Prince Charles, and they have gone to their own home—Appleton Hall—for a long and refined visit.

The Yorks are still trotting all over the country, alone and together, visiting the great ones, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire being among the most frequently favored. The men of our first family seem never tired of being the grace of Devonshire's guests, which proves that, in spite of her years, she has not lost nor weired of the art of entertaining. And the Duke of Richmond is again to be favored by a visit from the Yorks. And it is announced that his grace will be especially summoned to Balmoral. It rather looks as if his "backbone" during Goodwood was being rewarded. The Connaughts are going to Scotland to make family visits, and in November are going again to Italy, where last winter they had such a successful sojourn.

There are all kinds of rumors about the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg. She has gone with Princess Beatrice to Russia for several weeks' visit. You know each member of the Imperial family must live there for a portion of each year, or forfeit a part of his or her income. Ater Russia she will pay the Crown Princess of Rumania a long visit in her mountain home.

It is said that the Duchess has announced her intention of retiring to a convent when the Princess Beatrice is married. As the Princess is 16, her mother, it she follows her own precedent will have only a year and a half to wait. A Russian grand duke is desired by the mother; no doubt the Czarevitch would not be unacceptable. The Duchess is in a very depraved state of mind; has grown to detest Coburg, and is harboring most unfriendly feelings toward both England and Germany, which only proves that the loss of her son has completely upset her nerves, and makes one pity her maternal sorrow, without criticising her human and rather pliant way of showing it!

Last year you may remember, I sent you a long account of the wedding of the lovely Princess Pauline, of Wurtemberg. Last week a son and heir was born to the happy young couple. The young mother's father, the King of Wurtemberg, is delighted at having a grandson, and the baby's father, the hereditary Prince Wied, is radiant. It is his younger brother to whom the wisecracks are betrothing the Queen of Holland. Although her nineteenth birthday will be held on the 31st, she had made no sign, and if the family of Wied knew that she has selected one of them for Prince Consort they have kept their secret well.

Time does fly. When all these little ones of a few years ago are being married off I begin to feel I, too must soon be called a "wisecrack." Now, it is the eldest daughter of the Cumberlands whose engagement to Prince Frederick Henry, of Prussia, oldest son of the Regent of Brunswick, will shortly be announced. The Duke of Cumberland is a son of the late King of Hanover, who was a grandson of our George III. Because of siding against Germany—and losing the trick—they no longer use the Hanover title, but go back to the English one of Cumberland; nor do they reside on German soil, nor in Austria, in which country, the Duke is a colonel, to emphasize his anti-German feelings. His wife is the youngest of the King of Denmark's daughters, and quite unlike the Empress Dowager of Russia, and our Princess of Wales is rather plain. It was over the Hanoverian pearls that our own Queen had a quite commensurate and spiteful lawsuit—and the Queen lost!

Prince Henry, of Prussia, is to be home again for Christmas. He has been in China nearly two years part of which time his wife was with him. She is another of the Princesses Alice's pretty daughters, and has two boys, one ten and the second five, and it is hoped that this time when the expected stork comes there will be a girlie princess found in the cradle. The Prince's return and the stork's visit are expected about the same time.

Next we know Mrs. Langtry, for such she will be still be known on the stage, will begin again her theatrical career. I hear that for some time she has planned to return to the stage, but has waited until all conditions were to her mind. To get the theatre she wishes, as she is to be manager as well as leading lady; just the kind of play and exactly the company—all of these have been compassed. Every one is quite alive to see her. Her latest photographs make her quite beautiful—the hair still low on the nape of the neck, but the front hair piled and falling in heavy waves. Mr. Grady, the author of "The Degenerates," hesitated before offering the play to Mrs. Langtry, as the heroine is the mother of a girl of sixteen. Mrs. Langtry laughed when he told the reason for his shyness and said that nature had already forestalled him. Her marriage with M. de Bathe took place on the Island of Jersey just about the time her horse Mermaid, was winning at Goodwood. M. de Bathe has a most interesting family history on his father's side. The original Hugo de Bathe, for whom the bridegroom is named, was a friend of the great Strongbow, who he accompanied to Ireland in 1172. His father, Sir Henry, distinguished himself in the Crimean war. Their real home is in County Meath, but they live near Chichester, which is quite close to Goodwood. Sir Henry was, during the forties and fifties one of the most noted dandies in London; was a society favorite and an amateur actor of real ability. Once he played Tinsel in "The Hunchback," with Fanny Kemble as Julia and Henry Greville the Modus, and in the front row for audience they had the then Archbishop of Canterbury, Rachel, the French tragedienne, and the Duke of Wellington! M. de Bathe looks like his father, who was for years considered one of the two handsomest men in London. The bridegroom is a lieutenant in the Gloucestershire regiment, but does little 'except exist gracefully.'

I hear that Patti may postpone her debut, as Baroness Cedarstrom, in America some months, as she has been offered a continental tour with a concert season in Berlin. Melba has taken a house in London, and asks and receives £400 ($2000) a night at a private house.

THINGS OF VALUE.

"What gushing letters Hortense always writes!" "Yes; they say she uses a fountain pen."—Detroit Free Press.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is prepared from drugs known to the profession as thoroughly reliable for the cure of cholera, dysentery, diarrhoea, griping, pains and summer complaints. It has been used successfully by medical practitioners for a number of years with gratifying results. If suffering from any summer complaint it is just the medicine that will cure you. Try a bottle. It sells for 25 cents.

Dober—I am an artist sir. Bunko Bill—Shake! I sell gold bricks too.—New York Journal.

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is pleasant to take; sure and effective in destroying worms. Many have tried it with best results.

"Look at Aunt Josephine—laughing while she's playing solitaire."

"Ah! but she's cheating."—Chicago Record.

Why go limping and whining about your corns, when a 23 cent bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them? Give it a trial, and you will not regret it.

She—Mrs. Waggle says she often wakes up and finds her husband talking in his sleep. He—Poor man, that's likely the only chance he gets.—Cleveland Leader.

Safe, Certain, Prompt, Economical—These few adjectives apply with peculiar force to Dr. THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL—a standard external and internal remedy, adapted to the relief and cure of coughs, sore throat, hoarseness and all affections of the breathing organs, kidney troubles, excoriations, sores, lameness and physical pain.

"How the ocean roars!" "Yes; some of the bathing suits make me feel like roaring too."—Chicago Record.

An End to Bilious Headaches—Biliousness which is caused by excessive bile in the stomach, has a marked effect upon the nerve, and often manifests itself by severe headache. This is the most distressing headache one can have. There are headaches from cold, from fever, and from other causes, but the most excruciating of all is the bilious headache. Paralee's Vegetable Pills will cure it almost immediately. It will disappear as soon as the Pills operate. There is nothing sorer in the treatment of bilious headache.

Thirsty Lady—Is there any water aboard? Captain of excursion boat—July about four feet nimb; but please don't tell anybody.—New York Weekly.

They are not violent in Action—Some persons, when they wish to cleanse the stomach, resort to Epsom and other purgative salts. These are speedy in their action, but serve no permanent good. Their use produces violent chills, and if persisted in they injure the stomach. Nor do they act upon the intestines in a beneficial way. Paralee's Vegetable Pills answer all purposes in this respect, and have no superior.

Stub's (at the beach)—There goes that Miss Higgins. Don't you think she's a little out of order? Friend—Confound it, I didn't see her when she was in here.—Chicago News.
