Oct. 18.—The season of gaiety seems to be entered upon with much zest. The beautiful weather has suited and now sports and our football visitors from Ireland have had all the sport they wanted.

For the Crescents' at home' on Wednesday if the day had been made to order it could not have been more perfect. The flag ship, which, for the guests' convenience, was drawn up to the Dockyard pier, was in gala attire—the lower deck being entirely closed in with Union Jacks and bunting.

Every year previous to the departure of the Fleet, His Honor the Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Daly have always given a big ball, and this year was no exception. The function was held at Government House last night and proved to be one of the most successful of these pleasant occasions.

The decorations were on an elaborate scale and were elegantly arranged. Autumn leaves formed a feature in the festooning, and were set off by a splendid array of hot house plants and cut flowers. The dining room tables were also beautifully arranged and supper was served at midnight.

Shaded lights cast their pretty glow on the cosy sitting out nooks, and the grounds, too, were thrown open for promenading. Lieut.-Governor and Mrs. Daly received their guests in the ball room, Mrs. Daly looking extremely handsome in a pink and blue brade, trimmed with lace and jewels; her ornaments were diamonds. Miss Daly wore a butterfly brocade trimmed with violets.

The four debutantes looked very pretty in their handsome gowns. Miss M. O'Brien wore white trimmed with clusters of pink roses. Miss Kathleen Holmes wore a white silk with embroidered chiffon, and carried a bouquet of cream roses; Miss Smith and Miss Fuller also wore white.

The bright lights in the ball room showed to advantage the many handsome and dainty costumes worn, of which the following is a partial list: Lady Seymour, handsome dress of mauve silk. Miss Seymour, cream silk and violets. Lady Bedford, beautiful dress of yellow satin and diamonds and tias.

Miss Turton, white tulle and violets. Miss Abbott, white with black velvet. Miss Almon, cream silk. Miss Anerson, pink silk. Miss Alburo, white silk. Miss Bullock, white satin. Miss G.
