APRIL 12.—The "Marine" Tea given last Thursday evening by the ladies of Trinity church, was a very successful affair. The school room where it was held was tastefully adorned with fishing nets, sea shells of every description, canoes, oars and flags. Supper was served on the European plan by young ladies dressed as Dutch fish wives.
The menu was oysters, patties, creamed shrimps, cream oysters, lobster salad, ice cream, cake of all kinds, biscuit and coffee. A number of these dainties were concocted in chafing dishes and were most delicious. The amount of money raised was sixty dollars.

Miss Winifred Todd left this morning for Bangor where she will visit a school friend for a few days before returning to her studies at Abbot Academy at Andover, Mass.

Mrs. Walker Moore and Miss Cora Maxwell arrived from Boston yesterday. Miss Maxwell has been several weeks in the city studying music.

Miss Mollie Mangall who has been very ill with a severe attack of pneumonia, is now recovering much to the joy of her parents and friends.

Berta Smith this week.

Miss Winifred McAllister is in St. John the guest of Mrs. Oly Sharpe.

The Knights of Pythias expect to go to Eastport on an excursion on the new Washington county railway tomorrow, where they will be entertained by the Eastport knights. A grand ball is to be one of the features of the occasion. It is said a large number of people will take advantage of the excursion to visit Eastport.

Mrs. Martha Downes has returned from a visit in Robbinston with her friend Mrs. Susan Balk m.
Madame Lee who has been very ill, is reported to be slightly better this week.

Jones of Petticoat, who was admitted as a student of telegraphy in the I. C. R. station here last September passed his final examination in Moncton on the 31st day of March making a hundred per cent. on all his papers. Master Allison is only seventeen years of age and has the honor of being the only student who ever passed in such a short time—the space of little less than seven months—Allison has also another distinction, he endeavored himself to everyone with whom he has business to transact at the station and now since he has left a void is felt by all. Mr. George H. Davidson our popular station master was Allison's instructor in the art of sending dots and dashes.

Mrs. Davidson spent Tuesday with friends in Pet-

HUNGARIAN BANDS PASSING.
Gypsy Musicians Losing Favor Here and in Paris

The Hungarian musicians who were for a while a favorite feature of Paris life are now under a cloud.
Ever since the escapades of Clara Ward they have been compelled, unlike children, to be heard and not seen. Their music remained a feature of many cafes and restaurants; but they were no longer engaged to play at private entertainments and suddenly dropped from a position of modishness to the level of the ordinary bands. Hungarian bands were introduced in Paris at about the same time that they appeared in New York and London. In the two English-speaking cities their music immediately became fashionable and popular. For dances they were for several years the only musicians to engage who were considered smart. They never could play waltzes well, but the spirit and animation which they gave to polkas and similar dances kept them in demand. Some of the most elaborate dances used to have two bands, of which one was a regular orchestra, and to it was entrusted the playing of that music not suited to the Hungarian methods. The manner in which the bands increased here is well known. The same experience was witnessed in London. "Blue," "Green,"

MEDICAL SCIENCE ADVANCES.

Positive Cure for Asthma Discovered.

It has long been recognized by medical scientists throughout the world that nature has supplied all creation with some remedy in the vegetable or mineral kingdom wherewith all forms of ailments can be cured, but it was not until the discovery by Stanley of the wonderful Kola plant along the Congo River in Africa that asthma was permanently curable. In fact, it was not until the investigations made by Dr. Clarke some years later that this disease was found curable; he found that by combining the extract of Kola Nut with other vegetable extracts that the compound obtained would permanently cure asthma. Clarke's Kola Compound was then tried on over 100 cases in different hospitals, with the marvelous result that over 95 per cent were permanently cured in less than 60 days' treatment. Clarke's Kola Compound is now recognized to be the only permanent cure for this dreaded disease. Sold by all druggists. Free sample bottle sent to any person. Mention this paper. Address The Giffiths & Macpherson Co.,

'White' and 'Red' bands, distinguished by the color of their tunics, increased daily and overran restaurants and music halls. Both here and in London they have greatly declined in popularity during the past two or three years.

The fate of the Hungarian players in Paris seems to be settled, because they have been made ridiculous. They were never regarded here as fascinating in any sense of the word, but they managed to acquire that reputation in Paris, and the Ward-Rigo episode was the climax of that phase of their existence. There never seems to have been any difference in the views held concerning their physical appearance. After their compatriot Rigo became notorious they are said to have acquired an estimate of their charms quite inconvenient to persons of a different opinion.

So in many of the restaurants they were put almost out of sight, placed behind screens or in balconies, and deprived of a privilege which the leader of one of the bands is seeking to recover in court, namely, that of passing around a plate for contributions from their hearers. The musicians contend that this is their customary right, even if it is not officially mentioned in their contracts.

The restaurant proprietor against whom the suit is pending will not allow the men to walk among the guests, on the ground that they molest the women and otherwise seek to impress them with their charms in a way that has become intolerable.

The result of this contention has been to make the gypsies absurd in the eyes of the public, and that in Paris is usually fatal to further prosperity, even in the eyes of persons so unimpaired as these swarthy fiddlers. Anybody who has heard them in Budapest must remember that in the corridor of the Hotel Hungaria, where they play every night, their only compensation came apparently from the collectors who take up from the guests of the hotel. The frequency with which they pass around the hall there in the evening is enough to make a comfortable living for them.

The decline of the popularity of the Hungarian musicians here in New York has been attributed in a measure to the fact that the musicians are not as good as they used to be. Many of the bands are indeed unsatisfactory to persons who have no thought beyond the mere enjoyment of the music.

'Nobody ever thought when these players came to this country first,' said a musical manager, 'that they would become so popular. They were an immediate success and the demand for their services was far beyond the available supply. The result was that many players of little or no experience were brought here. The original bands were divided up, and the new bands probably included one or two of the original players, with a great many new importations. Sometimes the nationality of these organizations was not preserved with the strictness the public supposed. Italians were dressed in uniforms and looked enough like their colleagues to keep up the appearance of the organization. After they had become popular here their fame spread to other cities and they were sent all over the country. It was not to be supposed that under the circumstances the original quality of their performances would be maintained. The public is quicker to recognize such changes than the managers sometimes believe. So the Magyar players began to lose their popularity gradually and they are no longer regarded with the old time favor. In London there was no such great demand for the services of these men as came to New York from the principal cities of this country. So they did not deteriorate in quality there to the same extent as here.'

NEW STATUE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.
Frampton's Model of the Bronze Portrait to be Erected in Calcutta.

It is a cause of complaint among English artists that they have received little patronage from the Queen during the sixty years of her reign. In the last twenty years, at all events, the Queen has given a sitting to no English artist, preferring, it would seem, the more academical painters of Germany. But portraits and statues of the Queen by English artists do exist, the commissions proceeding not from royalty itself, but from patriotic bodies and institutions that desired to perpetuate their loyalty by a portrait or a statue of the Queen.
Lacking the advantage of actual sittings, it cannot be said that from an artistic point of view any of these portraits have been of marked excellence, and the statues, including that attributed to the Princess Louise, have most of them been pitiable failures, representing in most cases an idealized Victoria of comely, middle age.
This courtly flattery has indeed become a tradition so much so that it is generally understood that this rather than actual portraiture is in accordance with Queen Victoria's own wishes and desires. At last, however, this unwritten law has been set aside and a statue of the Queen has been produced which is worthy of notice quite apart from its subject. In order to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee a fund was raised in India. With part of this fund it was decided to purchase a statue of the Queen to be eventually erected in Calcutta. The commission was intrusted to George Frampton, A.
R. A., one of the younger of English sculptors.

Mr. Frampton has taken a foremost position not only as a sculptor, but also as an exponent of decorative art. He was, for instance, the pioneer in that school of colored bas-relief which forms a distinctive feature in modern English art work. His original y of method has been shown, too, by the skilful way in which he has introduced into his work a variety of materials, bringing together in one statue marble and decorative stones as well as a variety of metals.
Judged from a point of view beyond that of mere technique his work has been distinguished beyond that of almost all his contemporaries by its imaginative qualities. Now he has surpassed himself in the recently finished model for his statue of the Queen.
There are those who declare that this is one of the greatest statues which the English school of sculpture has produced during the present generation. The task was no easy one, hampered on every side as he was by precedent and convention. He burst through the fetters, however, and produced what is almost a realistic portrait of Queen Victoria as she lives and moves to day, not as she may have appeared a score or more of years ago, and yet has made her more truly regal than any of his flattering predecessors.

Seated on a throne which is in itself a striking example of the new school of decorative design, she sits in a natural attitude to which dignity is imparted by the disposition of the flowing state-robe which she wears. The head is slightly inclined forward, as though oppressed by the weight of age and care. And yet this very forward droop, which might so easily have suggested weakness, somehow conveys the idea of regnant power and strength. So with the face, which in realistic portraiture makes no attempt to blink the fact that the Queen is an old woman, yet speaks the dignity of the ruler in every line. It is a Queen who has ruled for an ordinary lifetime and is conscious of her power and proud of the way in which she has used that power, that Mr. Frampton has portrayed. The setting of the statue as well as its accessories will add greatly to its effect when it is finally erected in Calcutta. As it will be seen from all sides, pains have been taken to render even the direct rear view of it satisfactory. The back of the throne, for instance, has been symbolically treated, the main feature being a group consisting of a lion and a tiger walking amicably side by side and typifying England and the Indian Empire. Above the statue will be erected an arch, while the bronze figure itself will be placed upon a simple pedestal of marble. It will stand facing the huge plain called the Maidan which forms one of the social open air meeting places of Calcutta. The orb held in the left hand will be of a blue stone resembling lapis lazuli but not so subject as that precious material to disintegration by the weather, while this in its turn is surmounted by a gold and silver figure of a knight presumably St. George, holding a shield and a banner.

THINGS OF VALUE.

A SMALL PILL, BUT POWERFUL.—They that judge of the power of a pill by its size, would consider Fermele's Vegetable Pills to be lacking.
It is a little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The remedies which it carries are put in these small cases, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required.
