

No wonder our Yankee cousins shiver when they step off the steamers, for did ever you enjoy more delightfully cool weather than that of the past week. Why it was almost frosty in the early mornings and evenings, and overcoats felt good indeed. Still the sun shone in all his glory and the sir was purity itself. If this atmospheric state of affairs keeps up St. John will get the name of Canada's cold storage vault, as well as Winter Port.

The well bred summer girl has rebelled against the chaperon, as she does not consider her presence a necessity or a compliment to berself and her friends. One of the reasons given by the summer girl for dispensing with the time konored custom is that she no longer indulges in the same dangerous pastimes as did her sisters of years gone by. For instance she does not accept invitations to sail in the moonlight unless she is one of a party comprising ma ried and unmarried people in abundance. Nor does she wander along the beach after a dance. because the dampness is liable to ruin her gown and give her a severe cold. She no longer deprives her mother or her mother's friends of her society and is as frequently seen in their company as with the masculine element. This year's summer girl is not one bit affected. She does not seek to collect engagement rings. Her natural pride revolts against the idea of allowing complications to arise by engaging herself to a man whom she has not knewn for years, or of giving him a right to assume a familiar attitude toward her and to call her by her first name. Some are calling her prudish because of this new reserve, but it brings her more respect and therefore more admiration, and therefore demonstrates her cleverness.

"Must man still like a mummy swathe Himself to suit convention's rule; While woman-in the shirt she took From him-contrives to keep so cool?"

This is the guestion that is agitating that of mankind which finds itself compelled to spend its days in the palpitating heat of city streets and offices. Not only in New York, but in all the other large cities and even at the summer resorts, the question of sticking to the conventional coat or casting it aside in favor of the cool and comfortable negligee shirt is being actively discussed. Anenthusiastic and rapidly growing minority has adopted the latter course, while the timid or conservative members of the majority are divided between those who regard the innovation with envy and those who jeer at it openly. Careful investigation in the principal cities and summer resorts shows that as a rule the young men hail the proposed change with de light, while their elders, presumably more conservative, regard it with slight favor. The most hardened objectors to the new style seem to be the proprietors of theatres and restaurants and other places of public entertainment. In most of these places there are rules, written or unwritten, ag inst serving men without coats. These rules were probably not intended to be enforced against fashionable patrons, but head waiters or managers seldom are capable of discrimination, and instances are multplying daily of the ejection of men from such places because of their departure from the established custom which decrees that man must wear his coat regardless of the temperature. As these institutions exist for the convenience of the public, however, they are likely to fall into line as soon as the movement makes sufficient headway to secure
