A very pretty house wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Weston McAllister yesterday, when her daughter Sadie was married to Mr. Paul Sargent, of Machias. Only the relatives and intimate friends of the young couple were present. After the wedding a dainty collation was served, after which the bride and groom, accompanied by numbers of their young friends started for the train. Mr. and Mrs. Sargent left by Washington Co. Ry. for a brief honeymoon. On their return they will reside with Mrs. McAllister in Calais. The wedding presents were numerous, and among them were several of great value.

The funeral of the late James Murchie took place on Thursday last from his residence in Milltown. It was the largest funeral assemblage seen in Milltown for many a day. Many business men from the four towns and from the neighboring cities were present to witness and take part in the last sad rites of burial. The great respect in which the late Mr. Murchie was held makes many in this vicinity feel his loss deeply.

The groom was supported by his brother Mr. Achille Choquet. The church had been prettily decorated with moss, ferns and blossoms by members of the choir and others. Mr. Hillcoat presided at the organ. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. The bridal gifts were pretty and useful.

The news of Dr. T. H. Rand's death was received quality to cope with the vagaries of a disordered brain.

Moliere, the great French dramatist, was ill, and had retired to his villa at Auteuil for rest and quiet. One day Boileau, Lull and another friend came to visit him. Monsieur La Chappelle did the honors for Moliere. By the time supper was over, the guests were in so exalted a state that they resolved to set an example to France by dying philosophically together, to prove their contempt of the world. They determined to drown themselves in the Seine, but first went to bid their host an eternal farewell.

Moliere cast a hasty glance at the flushed faces around his bed. 'But you have forgotten me!' he cried. 'I, too, must share in this glorious act.'

'True, true!' they shouted. 'He is our brother! He shall die with us. Come on!'

with much sorrow. He and Mrs. Rand were on their way from Toronto to spend the summer here as they have done for several years. Some of Dr. Rand's finest poems were written at Partridge Island where he "watched nature at work." He will be greatly missed and will ever hold an honored place in the memory of those who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Called to Order.

'I asked that school teacher if she wouldn't take my life and mold it in her wise and gentle hands.'

'What did she say?'

'She said if I was proposing to her to say so and not undermine my intellect trying to talk shop.'

Presence of Mind.

Doctor Siddale, the well known London physician, during his vacation a few years ago was fishing one evening in a Scotch loch when a man approached, caught him by the shoulders, and shook him violently. A glance told the doctor that the man was insane. He was a huge fellow; the doctor was small and possessed of little physical strength. No one was in sight.

'What are you going to do?' asked the doctor, calmly.

'Throw you into that water!' shouted the man.

'Certainly,' said the doctor; 'but I'll have to go home and put on a dress suit. Dead men always wear evening dress.'

The madman stopped, looked at him doubtfully, and said: 'So they do. Make haste. I'll wait.'

Doctor Siddale walked slowly up the bank, and then ran for his life. It requires calmness and courage of a rare coming very friendly,—trying to meet. The others were just the reverse,—not on speaking terms at all. My poor nose was so white that it looked like a piece of dough or putty put on to suit the occasion.

Did I stay in the front row? Well, hardly. As soon as he discovered me, the stage-manager ordered 'that ugly person' to go into the back row, and back I went. One of the girls consoled me by saying I was not so ugly as I looked, and she afterwards assisted me to do better. Thereafter, by study and application, I was enabled to secure engagements in such good companies as Daly's, Rice's and Frohman's and to advance from the chorus to good speaking parts, with bright prospects ahead.
