Music and The Drama

TONES AND UNDERTONES.

The production of the opera, Nell Gwynne under the auspices of the Neptune Rowing club promises to be of great interest. The rehearsals are well attended and everything points to the opera's success,

In many of the churches music approp riste to the solemnity of the week was provided and in several the services closed with the national anthem, "God Save the King."

It is probable that Albain will be heard here sometime in March.

Adelina Patti will spend her summers in future at her husband's home in Sweden.

Lillian Blanvelt is making a professional tour of England and Scotland. She will return to America in March.

Sibyl Sanderson made her farewell appearance in Paris on Jan. 23, the occasion being a benefit to Gustave Wornis.

Emma Nevada, the famous American soprano has been engaged to sing in the Royal Dutch opera at the time of the marriage of the young queen of Holland.

Maurice Grau is no longer the director of Grand opera at Covent Garden in London. Mr. Grau claimed recently that he was uncertain whether he would continue there or not, pleading a desire for a respite from work and some of his responsibilities. This did not agree with a report from the other side that the Covent Garden people wished to make a change and did not offer Mr. Grau a reappointment.

It is related of Melba, the prima donna, that she acted as her own bill poster on the occasion of her second public appearance. She was 16 years of age and was staying with her tamily at an Australian watering place and determined to raise a fund for the restoration of the dilapidated cemetery in the place. She had some elaborate posters printed and saved the expenses of posting by pasting them herself on the walls about the town. Owing to her fathers opposition, however, the concert was not a success, the audience consisting of two persons for whose benefit the future prima donna sang in her best style.

Bruce McRae who was here with Harkins some seasons ago is spoken of thus by the Mirror beneath an excellent like ness of the actor. Bruce McRae is Julia Marlowe's new leading man, as Captain Trumbull in Barbara Frietchie. Mr. Mc Rae though an Englishman, is essentially an American actor, having made his first appearance on any stage in New York in 1891 and for the first five successive seasons was regularly engaged in Charles Frohman's first companies, appearing in all original casts of Thermidor, Aristoc racy, The Greater Shenandoah and The Fatal Card. He followed by a season with Olga Nethersole, playing the leading juvenile and light comedy roles Camile, Denise, The Wife of Scarli and the Daughter of France. Mr. McRae then joined Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon for The Coat of Many Colors and The Moth and Flame, and remained with them two years. Last season he originated the role of Dr. Watson in Sherlock Holmes, and was engaged by Mr. Dillingham for Charles Brandon in Miss Marlowe's production of When Knighthood was in Flower.

TALK OF THE THEATER

The bills presented by the Valentine Stock Company this week were 'The Honeymoon', the first three days. and 'The Stowaway' on Thursday and Friday. The Honeymoon is a charming piece, much en the style of the Taming of the Shrew, and with a suggestion of The Lady of Lyons in the first act. It was well staged and costumed. Miss Blancke played Juliana the leading female role in a perfect manner, and her support was good. Mr. King had his first opportunity outside Shakesperean roles and he used it to such excellent advantage that he won a great deal of praise and an unusual amount of spontaneous applause for his thoroughly good acting in the role of the Duke of Arenza. Mr. Woodall supplied a bright element of comedy. The balance of the cast left little to be desired

Recent letters from Mr. Frank L. Bixby to a member of Progress staff, bring the pleasing intelligence that the W. S. Harkins Company has made a great hit in Newfoundland. With characteristic diffi dence Mr. Bixby modestly admits that in St. Johns, Newfoundland, he is the "great pet of the aggregation as it is his pleasant duty to make nightly announcements beore the curtain."

A late number of the Dramatic Mirror, contains a picture of Ethel Knight Mollison of this city in the role of Alice Faulkner which she is now successfully playing in Sherloch Holmes. The press has very tavorably noted Miss Mollison's work in the part. Her portrayal of May Wedderburn, the English heroine in Richard Manefield's production of "The First Violin" is happily remembered

New York correspondence of the Boston Transcript says of Mrs. Danes Defenceand Margrret Anglin:

As Mrs. Dane, Miss Anglin has a most emotional role, that of the woman sinned against and sinning and trying according to Henry Arthur Jones to hide her past by hiding herselt in a small English countryside. Then she fall in love with a man much in love with her, and in trying to prove to his family and his friends her social unimpeachable of her position, which has been impeached by a self righteous neighborhood terror of a scandal monger, the past is unearthed. The poor girl, already severely punished for her girlish wrong doing is separated from her betrothed with one of Jones's sermonettes, and-curtain. The play isn't much of a play, and it is an undiluted 'problem' drama, the local renaissance of romantic melodrama to the contrary notwithstanding. It is a sad play that, in incompetent hands would be a bad quarter of an hour multiplied several times. With an evenly good company and Miss Anglin's acting it is a poignant play for much of the time. If anybody can enjoy good acting that is mighty sorrowful, then see Margaret Anglin as Mrs. Doane, and if the playing of the nerve wracked Lucy Dane leaves Miss Anglin any future in this life-which seems problematical, for she is but a wraith of a woman physically-then watch out for her work to come.

It is true that the play, which in a way recalls Wilkie Collins's 'New Magdalen, is a vehicle for a really remarkable piece of acting on the part of Margaret Anglin. This Canadian girl, who got her first dramatically important New York opportunity as Roxane in the Mansfield production of "Cyrano," has played notably well in several New York productions since then. She was the heroine in that amateurish and defective but not uninteresting play of "Brother Officers," the unheroic but appealing little companion at American dramatists must be working | the gallows of Carton in "The Only Way" ard. Grace George has had 200 plays dramatization of "The Tale of Two Cities," played the corresponding role in that good play that failed ot appreciation, which was produced by the late Charles Coghlan, "Citizen Pierre," etc. Yet the people in a theatre party who sat behind me the other night, and whose chatter proclaimed them inveterate theatregoers, ex citedly asked after Miss Anglin's great scene: "What's her name?" "Where did she come from ?" "Why, who is she, anyway ?" This incident of the chatterers but goes the further toward proving that the majority of theatregoers know only the names of theatrical stars and masculine matinee idols. And it helps to explain why every player of ability feels it incumbent upon him or her to become a star or matinee idol in order that popular acquaintance with their personality shall add commercial value to their talent. Nobody but stars are believed by managers to have any rights that they are bound to respect, This is a pity. It is our inchoate star system that keeps the average of the ensemble work of American dramatic productions so low.

> Maximilian In Mexico. 'The first pictures I can remember were of Queen Victoria and Henry Clay,' said a man who is now 50 and is taking his ease in New York. 'The picture of the Queen was a colored plate, a copy of the painting by Thomas Sully. How it ever got where I saw it I don't know.

> 'It hung in the home of my father, who was living on the border. There wasn't a white settlement ten miles west of his place. Indians used to come to his house to swap their work for anything they could get, and one of my recollections is their fondness for the Queen's picture. One of > them tried to steal it. 'The picture had quite a history later on. My father moved away from the border and went to St. Louis. Soon after a young artist came to our house to live. He became a celebrity. He painted the 'Country Election,' and during the Civil War he painted the celebrated picture known in Missouri as 'Order No. 11,' which was a commentary on canvas of a military order issued at that time which drove many Southern people out of the State. The artist was also a politician and if I mistake not he was conce a member of Congress, for the life of me I cannot recall his

"In the Civil War my father was a Con. federate soldier. It was the custom for Union soldiers to visit the bouses of Southern sympathizers in search of contraband articles. A squad went to my father's house. The young officer in command saw the painting of the Queen and took off his cap to it. He asked my mother if she was an English subject. An evasive reply was made, and the young officer politely begged pardon and said that his mother was an English wom in, and that a picture of her Queen in my house meant protection to that house so far as he was concerned. With that he ordered his squad away.

'At the close of the war a number of Contederates preferred to go to Mexico, and, as you may know more than a thousand, nearly all of whom had been officers in the Confederacy, crossed the border, and offered their services to Maximilian. My father was one of the number.

'Maximilian did not accept the service of the ex-Confederates, and each was left to decide his own destiny. Some remained in Mexico, and did well. My father purchased a plantation near the capital. One day several hunters stopped at his place and had dinner. They were foreigners, and their bearing proclaimed high birth.

'One of them became interested in the painting of Victoria and bought it. The family was loath to part with it, but the purchaser offered a price far beyond its value. Besides, he said he wished it for his wife. A few days later the painting was sent for.

'Its destination at the time was no known. But some time after a former Confederate visited my tather and inform ed him that his painting of Queen Victoria hung in the room of the Empress Carlotta, and that her husband, Maximilian, was the purchaser. He was one of the party who had visited my father's plantation. Of the subsequent history of the painting I know nothing. I would give any reasonable sum to get it.'

'What's the name of the fellow who wrote the tune of that coon song we've just been favored with?' asked one man of another at a meeting of the Amateur Composer's club.

'Jones,' returned the other man. 'Jas. Jones, I believe. Frank Walley wrote the words.'

'Ah, I was about to ask the name Jones's accomplice,' was the rejoinder.

Some time ago there was a notable automobile procession in the city of Buffalo, N. Y. It was notable for its size, and also for the fact that it was entirely composed of automobile wagons (like that in the cut above), built to distribute the advertising literature of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, proprietors and manufacturers of Dr. Pierce's medicines. In many a town and village Dr. Pierce's automobile has been the pioneer horseless vehicle. These wagons, sent to every important section of the country, are doing more than merely advertise Dr. Pierce's Remedies they are pioneers of progress, heralds of the automobile age.

And this is in keeping with the record made by Dr. Pierce and his famous preparations, which have always kept in the front on their merits. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is still the leading medicine for disorders and diseases of the stomach and digestive and nutritive systems, for the purifying of the blood and healing of weak lungs.

Women place Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in the front of all put-up medicines specially designed for women's use. The wide benefits this medicine has brought to women have been well summed up in the words " It makes weak women strong and sick women well."

The reputation of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets as a safe and effective laxative for family use is international.

It may be asserted without fear of con tradiction that no other firm or company engaged in the vending of put-up medi-cines can rank with the World's Dispensary Medical Association, either in the opinion of the medical profession or of the intelligent public. The Invalida Hotel and Surgical Institute, which is connected with the "World's Dispensary," is alone sufficient to prove this supremacy. Here is a great modern hospital, always filled with patients. where every day successful operations are performed on men and women whose diseases demand the aid of surgery. No hospital in Buffalo is better equipped, with respect to its modern appliances, or the surgical ability of its staff. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the chief consulting physician of this great institution, has associated with himself nearly a score of physicians, each man being a picked man, chosen for his ability in the treatment and cure of some special form of disease.

The offer that Dr. Pierce makes to men and women suffering with chronic diseases of a free consultation by letter, is really without a parallel. It places without cost or charge the entire re-sources of a great medical institute at the service of the sick. Such an offer is not for one moment to be confounded with those offers of "free medical advice" which are made by people who are not physicians, cannot and do not practice medicine, and are only saved from prosecution by artfully wording their advertisements so that they give the impression that they are physicians without making the claim to be licensed.

Those who write to Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalidation Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., may do so with the assurance that they will receive not only the advice of a competent physician, but the advice of a physician whose wide experience in the treatment and cure of disease, and whose sympathy with human suffering leads him to take a deep, personal interest in all those who seek his help and that of his associate staff of specialists. Dr. Plerce's Medical Adviser (in paper covers), 1008 pages, is sent free on seceipt of 31 one-cent stamps, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume, to pay expense of customs and mailing only.
