Among the dearest of the home-made sofa pillows are those of green and white seersucker in a small unbroken check. The pillow is edged with a double ruffle of the seersucker. The front of the pillow is worked with a border, done in white double cotton not to coarse. There is a row of double cross stitch all round, next the ruffle. Inside that there is a row of alternate Maltese crosses and spider webs with just one row of cross stitch between each to separate them. The crosses and spider webs cover sixteen of the small squares each. Inside of this row is another of double cross stitch which covers four of the small squares. This is all the decoration, but the effect is very pretty and the cover laundies easily. Another pillow cover on the same style is made on heavy white linen. Draw single threads on the squares on the linen and the design is worked in dark brown and bright yellow silk, in just the same manner as on the seersucker covers, the colors alternating.
