Mr. HAMMELL, SURGEON,

In one of his Majesty's late British American Corps, intending to practice Physick, offers his service to the respectable Public.

AFTER completing an eight years study in Physick, Surgery, and Midwifry, (during which time he had the advantage of a very extensive City practice in most disorders peculiar to this Continent) he then entered into the Army, where by dint of the strictest attention to the variety of complaints that has occurred in it for near seven years, he is induced to think he has acquired a competent knowledge in the healing Art, as render it possible for him to afford relief to such of his fellow-creatures as may require the assistance of Medicine. Having suffered in common with those who have sought an asylum in this place, experience teaches Mr. HAMMELL, how necessarily contracted the circumstances of many must be, therefore humanity will prompt him to give his attendance on the most moderate terms.

Carleton, St. James's Street, No. 124.

LOOSLEY begs leave to inform the inhabitants of this town that he has an ever flowing well of water in his cellar and so easy of access that either male or female by turning the button of the trap door that leads thereto, may draw a sufficient quantity to serve them, and from one of the purest fountains in Nova-Scotia—Pro Bono Publico.

Carleton, January 21, 1784.

Masters of vessels and others arriving at this Port, are requested on their arrival, to send their letters to the Printing and Post-Office, No.
3, King-Street, where they will be regularly delivered out.

LOOSLEY
PRESENTS his most respectful compliments and sincere thanks to those gentlemen who have done him the honor of their custom since his residence in this city, and as he was no stranger to most of them during the time he kept tavern at New-York and Brooklyne, he is in hopes they are sensible, that his disposition to please was the effectual means of his fatal overthrow at the latter place, which obliged him, at an earlier period than his inclination would have led him, to remove to this infant settlement, where, by the assistance of some friends, he was reinstated (far exceeding his expectations) in the line of life he so long had practised. Mr. Loosley makes no doubt that his obliging customers are sensible (since his officiating Pro Bono Publico in this place) that his assiduity to give general satisfaction has not in the least deviated from their former knowledge of him, but is not a little chagreened to observe that public notice he gave some time ago, signifying that no Credit in future would be given by Charles Loosley, was never attended to, he is now again, and for the last time, under the disagreeable necessity of informing the community in general, that trusting after this will not hurt his interest, for he too well knows the bad consequence (and a burnt child dreads the fire) therefore hopes his friends will never put him to the blush by being obliged to give a refusal; and he most earnestly entreats those who are indebted to him to make as speedy payment as may be convenient.

Carleton, January 21st, 1784.

FRANCIS YOUNG,
Watch-Maker, late of New-York,
PRESENTS his most respectful
thanks to the public in general, and his former friends in particular, and begs leave to inform them that he carries on the watch making business, at his house No. 92, corner of St.
James & Charlotte streets, and hopes for a continuance of their favours.
