

Court of Apollo.

SONG,

In the New Comic Opera of WILMORE CASTLE.

Sung by Mr. Bannister, jun.

NO doubt, good folk, and I pledge my word,
Of a COCKNEY you have often heard;
For he's a nice and tasty lad,
A spruce—a smart—a flashy blade—
Distinguish'd by his gait and air,
For cock of hat, and drefs of hair—
To all polite—
Morn, noon and night,
Bows like a Lord,
And keeps his word
With any HE—you e'er did see—
Now, what do you think of a COCKNEY?

In Love's sweet passion who will dare
With him to cope—with him compare!
For a COCKNEY all the girls admire,
He's such an am'rous spark of fire—
That all he does, and all he says,
Gets many a fair one's envied praise—
He'll fight, and leer,
And cry, my dear,
A lover true
I'll prove to you—
As any HE—you e'er did see—
Now, what do you think of a COCKNEY?

In all the freaks of mirth and fun,
Pray, when was ever he outdone!
For a COCKNEY is a merry grig,
Will lead a dance, or hop a twig,
Will box, or fence, or play the wag,
Or drive a coach, or vault a nag—
Will sing and laugh—
His bottle quaff—
A lad of merit—
And of spirit—
As any HE—you e'er did see—
Now, what do you think of a COCKNEY?

From a late London paper.

GENERAL TOUSSAINT.

As this remarkable personage has lately been an object of much public curiosity, the following narrative will, no doubt, prove gratifying to our Readers. It is written by a British officer, who was taken prisoner on his passage to join his regiment at Martinique, and was not only civilly treated by TOUSSAINT, but afterwards saved by that singular man from death, to which he had been sentenced, in consequence of subsequent suspicions of his being a spy.

"I returned to the American hotel," says the writer, "and was introduced to the table d'hôte, to behold for the first time a perfect system of equality!"

"Here were officers and privates, the General and the fifer, at the same table indiscriminately.—Here also TOUSSAINT dined, but did not take the head of the table, from the idea (I was informed) that no man should be invested with superiority but in the field. In the evening I went to the billiard table, where TOUSSAINT also came. Much hilarity prevailed, and his affability highly increased the satisfaction of the company. I played with him, and found nothing to dissipate the pleasure which the novelty of the scene inspired. There were several tables in the same room, at which all played with the same familiarity with which they dined.

"I was here informed that a review was to take place on the following day, in the plain of the Cape; and desirous of being present at such a spectacle, I was accompanied by some Americans, and others of my own country, who resided in the Island under that appellation.

"There were two thousand officers out, generals and ensigns, all carrying arms—yet with the utmost regularity and attention to rank—none of that disregard which had marked the leisure of the preceding day being the least evident. Each general officer had a demi-brigade, which went through the manual exercise with a degree of expertness I had seldom before witnessed, and they performed excellently well several manœuvres applicable to their method of fighting. At a whistle, a whole brigade ran three or four hundred yards, and then, separating, threw themselves flat on the ground, changing to their backs and sides, and all the time keeping up a strong fire till recalled—after this they formed again into their wonted regularity; and this manœuvre is executed with such facility and precision, as totally to prevent cavalry from charging them in bushy and hilly countries. Indeed, such complete subordination prevailed, so much promptness and dexterity, as must astonish an European who had known any thing of their previous situation.

"I have more than once seen sixty thousand men reviewed, at one time, on the plains of the Cape, in complete subordination in the field, and whose united determination against an invading enemy, would be victory or death! Nocoercion is necessary among them, and it is of course unattempted; the only punishment inflicted, is a sense of shame produced by slight confinement.

"Amongst a people thus hardened to an orderly ferocity—trained from inclination—impenetrably fortified on the finest territory on earth, and next to inaccessible to external attack, what hopes are entertained of the success of the present armament I know not; but, whatever might be expected from a compromise with TOUSSAINT, I feel perfectly convinced no other means will succeed in the subjugation of St. Domingo. United as are the Blacks and Mulattoes, fifty thousand men would ere long be dissipated in such an attempt; and if the number now sent against them could be found sufficient to effect a temporary conquest, what number of men would continue to keep them in subjection?

"TOUSSAINT L'OUVREURE, the present Commandant of St. Domingo, is one of those characters, which contentions for power and the extension of territory, as well as the jers of individual interest, have not unfrequently introduced to astonish the World.

"Born a Slave, in which capacity he continued till the Revolution, it is hostile to received opinions to consider him in any other light than as a fortunate Brigand; but chance has directed that the present writer should be constrained to acknowledge—he is worthy of imitation as a man—he excites admiration as a Governor—and as a General, he is yet unsubdued without the probability of subjection! His regard for the unfortunate appears the love of human kind; and, dreaded by different nations, he is the foe of none. To the English he is by no means inimical, and, in possession of many of the blessings of humanity, he courts the acceptance of the World.

"He is a perfect black, at present about fifty-five years of age—of a venerable appearance, but possessed of uncommon discernment. Of great suavity of manners—he was not at all concerned in the perpetration of the massacres, or in the confiscation.

"He is styled the General en Chef and is always attended by four Aids-de-Camp. He wears as a uniform, a kind of blue spencer, with a large red cape falling over his shoulders, and red cuffs, with eight rows of lace on his arms, and a pair of large gold epaulettes thrown back on his shoulders; a scarlet waistcoat, pantaloons, and half boots;—a round hat with a red feather and national cockade; and an extreme large sword is suspended from his side. He receives a voluntary respect from every description of his countrymen, which is more than returned by the affability of his behaviour, and the goodness of his heart. Of his civilities to myself, I have sufficient reason to be proud.

"I met him frequently, during my stay in his dominions, and had no occasion of complaint, even from human errors."

Some of the transparencies exhibited in London, on the ratification of the preliminaries of peace, were of a singular nature, and afforded much merriment to the populace.

A transparency in a street in St. Ann's Parish, represented Mr. Pitt, the First Consul of France, Mr. Wyndham and Joseph Bonaparte, dancing a Fandango to a tune played on Union Bagpipes. John Bull appeared in a corner, with a purse in his hand, ready to pay the piper.

An house in Old-street displayed a transparency, on one side of which was portrayed a quartern loaf, under which were the words, "I am coming down." By the side of the loaf appeared a pot of porter, well frothed, which was made to rejoin, "So am I."

PEACE.

Hark! what a dulcet sound, which sweet and clear,
Fills with melodious flow the list'ning ear!
'Tis PEACE! dear cherub! come from Heaven again,
With blissful tidings of good will to men!

Joy like the dawn illumines the cherish'd earth;
Each eye is bright, each bosom thrills with mirth:
Glad Commerce spreads her sail, and man invites,
To toil, and share rich plenty's pure delights.
The human brow is smooth—commotions cease—
And happy Europe hails the reign of PEACE!
