

From the New-York Weekly Inspector.
NUGÉ CANORÆ.
 The following smooth numbers are from a poem called,
 "The Art of Dressing the Hair."
 WITH various art the tortured curls to place,
 Confirm their structure, and dispose with grace:
 The puff to manage with exactest care,
 And pour the snow-white shower on every hair,
 To teach; embolden'd by the Muse's aid,
 To leave the shaving for the tuneful trade.

Oh, Phœbus! patron of the sons of songs,
 God of the quacking and the fiddling throng;
 Let my low shop be with thy presence blest,
 And all thy raptures struggles in my breast!
 What though untaught by art thy ringlets twine,
 No engines scorch, or papillotes confine;
 What though, unhorn, the honours of thy head,
 In wild luxuriance down thy shoulders spread,
 Nor bag hath dar'd enclose, or ribbon tye,
 Nor borrow'd locks their friendly help supply;
 What though no bristles thy smooth chin conceal,
 But down eternal innocent of steel;
 Let not in vain an honest barber sue,
 Though ne'er the labours of his hand you know;
 But, like my razor, make my lines appear
 Smooth, though not dull; and sharp, though not severe.
 And since these hands on many an empty pate
 Ne'er form'd by nature for dispensing fate,
 Oft have been taught the mighty bush to lay,
 Which gave the bearer privilege to slay;
 Who without learning had obtain'd degrees,
 By stealing theses, and by paying fees:
 Teach me what unguents will the loss repair,
 When fallen tresses leave the temple bare;
 What styptic juices will assistance lend,
 Relax'd and weaken'd if the curls depend.

Nor ye grave mortals, too severe and sage,
 For the light follies of this sportive age,
 Frown, that I so much tenderness express
 For outward polish, and the arts of dress.
 Not be that thinks all night, and plods all day,
 Will captivate the fair, or please the gay;
 Not letters, your absurd pedantic plan—
 Dross and the barber's art complete the man.
 Oft have I known a youth whose leaden skull
 His tutors cur'd, impenetrably dull;
 Who toil'd from clafs to clafs with labour fore,
 Some little learning got, but flogging more.
 Yet by my care into perfection grow,
 And though no scholar, prove a charming beau.

Your Gentle limbs on downy sofa's throw,
 And bid secure each happy moment flow,
 Not unimprov'd; in secret conclave mix;
 The laws of dress, the change of fashions fix.
 If ponderous clubs shall from behind depend,
 Or queues in formidable length descend;
 If high the double curl shall rise in air,
 Shoot up aloft, and leave the temples bare;
 Or, in one circle of extensive fold,
 Belles shall admire, your graceful tresses roll'd,
 Exert your eloquence, display your taste,
 In praise of wash-balls or of almond-paste;
 What dentrifice a lasting white bestows,
 What healing lip-salve emulates the rose.

WRITING SEMINARY.
As every Art is more or less valuable in proportion to its extensive usefulness, so the Art of Writing above all claims our highest esteem, it being one of the greatest blessings man can enjoy; every attempt therefore to improve, and bring it nearer to perfection, as 'tis a public good, is doubtless entitled to a public encouragement: consequently,
MR. PHILLIPS

Proposes opening an EVENING SEMINARY (commencing the New-Year) three times a Week between the hours of 6 and 7½ past 8, for the instruction of the following useful Branches of PENMANSHIP, viz: Round Text, Round and Running Hands, in a free and masterly style.—German Text, Square Text, Engrossing, Secretary, Old and New English Print, Italic Hand and Print, and Chancery, besides all the useful and Ornamental Branches of modern Penmanship.

Mr. PHILLIPS having by him a valuable repository of the performances of the most eminent Writing Masters, containing a fund of useful knowledge in Letters of correspondence, Forms of Bills of Parcels and Exchange, Invoices, Memorials, &c. with a variety of other matter; his Pupils may glean much information from thence, independent of instruction in Penmanship.

Terms per quarter FOUR DOLLARS, the number to consist of 15—Application made to Mr. P. will meet attention.
Saint John, 26th October, 1807.

Yearly Subscription Proposals
 For the establishment of a DRAWING SCHOOL,
 To commence on New-Year's Day.
 To afford the Public an opportunity of Instruction in this pleasing and useful accomplishment,
MR. PHILLIPS

Proposes the Instruction of a number, no more nor less than TWENTY, upon the very low terms of EIGHT DOLLARS per YEAR.

AN Establishment so connected with Education, needs no comment to recommend its utility. It may be justly acknowledged that without this attainment the Fair Sex, or Gentleman Scholar, is not in the possession of a liberal Education. This highly useful art comprising one of its most essential branches. It is the peculiar ornament of a Lady's Education, and of the most important service to persons designed for business, particularly professional characters; with instructive profit it pleasingly employs the intervals of business and pleasure, and disposes the minds of youth to attractive study.

THE Flower Garden, the busy scenes of Society, the cultivated Plain, the romantic scenery of Waters, Woods, and Rocks, and the solitary Walk; furnishes the possessor of this polite art, at all times agreeable company, amusement and delight: Nature ever various, opens to his view the charms of creative beauty, and inspires his mind with grateful devotion to its Supreme Author.

Specimens of his Scholars performance and rapid improvement in one Quarter's instruction, may be seen by application to him at his School Room, between the hours of 2 and 5 Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.
