

LATET IN HERBA.
 MY love and I the other day,
 Within a myrtle arbour lay,
 When near us, from a rosy bed,
 A little snake put forth its head.
 "See," said the maid with laughing eyes—
 "Yonder the fatal emblem lies!
 Who could expect such hidden harm
 Beneath the rose's velvet charm?"
 Never did mortal thought occur,
 In more unluckily hour than this;
 For, oh! I just was leading her
 To talk of love and think of bliss.
 I rose to kill the snake; but she,
 In pity begg'd it might not be.
 "No," said the nymph, and many a spark
 Flashed from her eyelids as she said it;
 "Under the rose or in the dark,
 One might perhaps have cause to dread it:
 But when its wicked eyes appear
 And when we know for what they wink so,
 One must be very simple, dear,
 To let it sting one;—Dont you think so?"

POWER OF FASHION.
 The following anecdote will show, in a striking manner, the influence of fashion, (and in this instance, a most ridiculous fashion) over the human mind.

A gentleman of large fortune fell violently in love with a lady much inferior to him in point of property, but far his superior in intellectual talents. He addressed her for some time with a zeal becoming her merits. But at length she told him the never could consent to marry him, till he had required a sacrifice, which she feared would be infinitely too great for him to make. If it be half my estate, said he, it shall cheerfully be laid upon the altar of love. That said the lady is but a trifle to what I am about to demand. If you would have the whole of my fortune, and myself for your slave, replied the suitor, I will not demur. It is more than all that, said the fair damsel. Name your terms, name your terms! cried the impatient lover.—Bid me wage war with giants, or fight the fierce lions of the desert; and my love for you shall make me victorious. Nay, order me to the Indies, to China, or Japan, and you shall be obeyed. The sacrifice is still greater than all that, said the lady. For compassion's sake, then, cried he in despair, tell me what it is? It is no less than this, said she, that you have off your monstrous whiskers, that I may have the pleasure of beholding your face!—My whiskers! cried he in astonishment! my whiskers! O heavens! No, madam, be it known to you, I will not part with my whiskers, to obtain the heart and hand of any daughter of Adam now existing on the face of the earth.—London paper.

THE TWO BROTHERS.
 In a manuscript in one of the libraries at Paris, we are told that the count de Ligniville and count de Autricourt, twins descended from an ancient family in Lorraine, resembled each other so much, that when they put on the same kind of dress, which they did now and then for amusement, their servants could not distinguish the one from the other. Their voice, gait and deportment were the same, and these marks of resemblance were so perfect, that they often threw their friends and even their wives into the greatest embarrassment. Being both Captains of light horse, the one would put himself at the head of the other's squadron, without the officers ever suspecting the change. Count de Autricourt having committed some crime, the Count de Ligniville never suffered his brother to go without accompanying him, and the fear of seizing the innocent instead of the guilty, rendered the orders to arrest the former of no avail. One day Count de Ligniville sent for a barber, and after having suffered him to shave one half of his beard he pretended to have occasion to go into the next apartment, and putting his night gown upon his brother, who was concealed there, and tucking the cloth which he had about his neck under his chin, made him sit down in the place which he had just quitted. The barber immediately resumed his operation, and was proceeding to finish what he had begun, as he supposed, but to his great astonishment, he found that a new beard had sprung up. Not doubting that the person under his hands was the devil, he roared with terror, and sunk down in a swoon on the floor. While they were endeavouring to call him to life, Count de Autricourt retired again in the closet, and Count de Ligniville, who was half shaved, returned to his former place. This was a new cause of surprise to the barber, who now imagined that all he had seen was a dream, and he could not be convinced of the truth until he beheld the two brothers together. The sympathy that subsisted between these brothers was no less singular than their resemblance. If one fell sick, the other was indisposed also; if one received a wound, the other felt pain; and this was the case with every misfortune that befel them; so that, on this account they watched over each other's conduct, with the greatest care and attention. But what is still more astonishing, they both often had the same dreams. The day that Count de Autricourt was attacked in France by the Fever of which he died, Count de Ligniville was attacked by the same in Bavaria, and would have sunk under it like his brother, adds the manuscript, had he not made a vow to a lady of Alenting.—Ibid.

Indian Tooth-Ache Drops.

AN efficacious remedy for the Tooth-Ache has been discovered by the Subscriber, which has never failed, in hundreds of applications of it to the Teeth and Gums, has frequently been found sufficient to eradicate this (of all others) most irksome and intolerably painful disease. In general, its effect on the Teeth and Gums has been such, that after using it three or four times, an instance of pain has not occurred. It is composed entirely of Indian Herbs and Roots; and is for sale at J. S. MORT'S Printing-Office.—Price Seven Shillings and Six pence per Phial.

The subjoined certificates of Alderman Furman and others will shew its wonderful effects.—They form but a small proportion of the number that can be produced.

N. B. These Drops will not injure the looks of Teeth or Gums, but will preserve them white and clean.

MITCHEL M'CARTHY.

NEW-YORK, 17th DECEMBER, 1808.

At the request of Mr. Mitchel M'Carthy, I do certify, that I was severely afflicted with a tooth-ache and pain in my face the 1st September last—that I procured a phial of his drops on the 3d—was entirely relieved, and have not had it since. And also, that my black girl has been since severely afflicted with the tooth-ache. I procured her a phial of the same drops which did also relieve her.

GABRIEL FURMAN, No. 3 Wall-Street.

HALIFAX, JUNE 8, 1809.

This is to certify, that I was for three years at times afflicted with that intolerable pain the tooth-ache, and having procured a phial of Mr. M'Carthy's Indian drops, I have not since felt the least symptoms of it.

ELIZABETH HAWLE, near the North Barrack.

HALIFAX, JUNE 10, 1809.

At the request of Mr. M'Carthy, I do certify, that I have been severely afflicted with the tooth-ache in May last, that having procured a phial of his drops, and after the first application as directed by him, I have felt no symptoms of it since.

JAMES O'ROURKE.
