« In conformity to the direction issued by government, for the complete destruction of the dead bodies of men and horses, belonging to the enemy, which fell in battle, or perished from the cold, and had not been committed to the earth, the following reports have been transmitted by the governors of different Provinces.

« In the government of Minsk, up to the end of January, 8,797 dead bodies of men, 2,743 of horses, had been burned ; and there still remaind to be, burned, of the former, 30,108: and of the latter, 27,316; the greater part of which were found on the banks of the Beresina.

« In the government of Moscow, up to the 15th of Feb. 49,754 dead bodies of men, and 27,849 of horses, had been burnt, besides a number of others that were buried.

« In the government of Smolensk, up to the 2d of March, 71,735 dead bodies of men, and 51,430 of horses had been committed to the flames.

« In the government of Wilna, up to the 8th of March 72,202 dead bodies of men, and 9,407 of horses had been put under the ground.

« In the government of Kaluga, up to the 11th of March, 1,017 human corpses, and 4,884 dead horses had been burnt,

« The sum of the whole was 213,516 human corpses, and 95,816 dead horses ; exclusive of many others, burned or buried, of which no account was taken—The strictest measures have been taken for destroying, before the approach of spring the dead bodies that may be found in the rivers or woods."

By the Steam-Boat, arrived last night, we received paper containing London dates to the 29th June, from them we have extracted the following :—

LONDON, JUNE 18.

Extract of a letter from Malta, dated May 18, via Marseilles.

" It is said, indeed promulgated by Government, that the Bey of Tunis has lost his head by his own Son, for liberating the Christian slaves ; and that in the absence of the British fleet, they had equipped their frigates, and determined to take every thing they met with. It is currently reported that one English vessel has been taken and the crew murdered.

JUNE 21.

Some melancholy intelligence from the Mediterranean was received in town yesterday, in account of an unprovoked massacre of an immense number of Christians in the Algierine sea-port town of Bona, situated many leagues to the East of Algiers. It appears that about 700 mariners, belonging to the crews of the Coral fishing-boats, under English and French colors, landed on Ascension Day to go to Church, when a great number of armed Turks and Bedouins broke into the Church and immediately proceeded to kill all within it. Of these horrible atrocities the following authentic particulars were yesterday received at Lloyd's :—

Further Information from Genoa, dated June 8.

" We informed you on the 6th inst. of the horrid insurrection at Bona, on the 23d ult. against the Christian, which, we are sorry to say, is confirmed. It appears, from private letters, that on Ascension-days, about 700 marriners, belonging to the crews of the Coral fishing-boats, under English and French colors, had landed that morning, to go to Church, when all of a sudden, a great number of armed Turks and Bedouins entered the church and began to kill and slaughter all those that were not lucky enough to effect their escape on board. It is said that the Governor endeavored to oppose with his force what resistence he could, and that M. Escadero, in endeavoring to appease the furious bands was mortallity wounded. The number of victims that have been cut off is not yet known.

" A boat arrived here on the 2d instant with the crew of a French Tartan, which was captured by the pirates on the 16th ult. near Cape Danzo, off the Roman shore, after a resistance of about half an hour. The crew then took to their boats, and got on board a Greek vessel.

The following is the deposition of Jaques Nillano, owner of a felucca which has arrived here from Bona, near Algiers, on the Barbary Coast :

" On the 23d of May 350 barks of different nations, were as usual, off Bona fishing for coral. At daybreak a cannon shot was heard, and the same moment a great number of armed men, to the amount of about 5000, some of them on horse-back, issued from the town, and fell upon the seamen of the of said barks who were on shore, massacreing all without distinction of flag. I escaped from the masacre, because, being, happily at some distance from the town, I had time to embark, as well as three passengers only, who have arrived with me, abandoning all our fishing stores and provisions. As far as I could observe, I calculate that about one hundred of the said vessels fell a prey to the Algerines, with the greater part of their crews, and that 300 men were killed in this unexpected attack of these barbarians.---The Brother of the English Vice-Consul, resident at Bona, saved himself by flight, after being wounded. I am ignorant of the Vice-Consul's fate. It appeared evident, that the Algerine Government was a party to this aggression, because the cannon of the forts at Bona kept up an incessant fire on our boats."

PORTSMOUTH, JUNE 15.

The Havanah which arrived this morning from St. Helena, brigs an account, that on the 3d inst. off Fayal, she parted company with the Ferret, sloop of war, of 12 guns, Captain Sterling (2,) which had left St. H. on the 27th of March, for England, but when crossing the Line, she fell in with a ship under Spanish colours, having a cargo of slaves on board, which upon her near approach to speak to her, fired into the Ferret, and killed two of her men---an action ensued, and, after a running fight of about four hours, at the moment that captain Sterling was preparing to board, she struck.---The Ferret afterwards proceeded with her to Sirra Leone, where it is expected she will be condemned as a pirate. The Ferret had five men killed and wounded in the action.

LONDON, JUNE 29.

The violences of the Barbary powers are the subject of much and just complaint thoughout Europe ; and as usual, when assistance is needed, England is looking up to for it. The inferior powers have been so long accustomed to our gratuitous exertions in their favour, that they seem to consider themselves entitled to demand them as matter of right, and even to heap reproaches on us in case of delay. Such is the substance of a long article in a Haarlem paper brought by the Dutch mail yesterday ; and some of our own declamatory politicians join in the senseless cry. " Britain, and Britain only, (say they) must deal the blow." Assuredly Britain must and will defend the honour of her own flag. Instructions have already been sent out to admiral Penrose who has doubtless taken measures for the protection of our trade in the Mediterranean. But it is quite a different question whether we shall lavish our blood and treasure for Neapolitans, Sardinians, Romans, Spaniards, or Portuguese. In the present state of our finances, we cannot afford mere Quixotism. If these powers, or any of them, are incapable of defending themselves, let them pay us for the service, and it will no doubt be effactually performed. The Mediterranean powers have no claim on our gratuitous assistance : there is not one of them that is not already deeply indebted to us ; but of their gratitude for our benefits the world has yet heard little.

Died this morning at Queensboro' Catharine, wife of Mr. Thomas Jouett, in the 32d year of her age, of a severe illness which she bore with extreme patience and christian fortitude---she has left a husband and eight infant children with a numerous train of relatives to regret her.
