

POETRY.

(From the Church of England Magazine.)

PETER'S REPLY.

"Simon Son of Jonas, lovest thou me?"
John xxi. 17.

O! how no more my love to thee,
Who suffer'd thus to ransom me
From sin, from Satan, and from hell:
Thou knowest, Lord, I love thee well.

I lov'd thee, when thy gracious call
First bade me leave my earthly all;
To follow thee, and take my cross,
Counting all other things but loss.

I lov'd thee on that darksome night,
When thou thy servants didst invite,
To trust thy footsteps on the wave,
Believing thou hadst power to save.

I lov'd thee, when on Tabor's height
Thy form was seen in glory bright:
Delighted with a scene so blest,
I wish'd for ever there to rest.

I thought I lov'd thee, when I said,
"O! be not number'd with the dead:"
How rash the speech no tongue can tell,
And yet I think I lov'd thee well.

When my vain lips presum'd to say,
That "I should never turn away;
Though others might forsake, yet I
Would never my living Lord deny."

I thought not then how soon my fall
Would prove me weaker than them all;
My own proud heart I dar'd to trust,
Which quickly brought me to the dust.

Worse than myself no fiend could prove,
I sinn'd against both light and love,
Thou spakest true; the cock crew twice,
And I denied my Master thrice.

But, O that look! that look of thine,
Which kindly told me thou wast mine!
Dissolv'd the trembler into tears,—
It broke my heart, yet quell'd its fears.

Since then I think I've lov'd thee more
Than ever sinner lov'd before;
The chief of sinners is forgiv'n!
Proclaim it loud thro' earth and heav'n.

Thy prayer hath sav'd me; thine embrace
Upheld my soul by sov'reign grace;
Thine arm restor'd me when I fell;
I love thee, Lord; thou know'st it well.

Advantage of Ignorance.

The following circumstance took place in a neighboring town, a short time since. A fellow hearing there was a letter for him in the Post Office, accordingly went for it. On the Post-Master's handing it to him, he frankly confessed he could not read, and requested the Postmaster to open it, and let him know the contents, which he very readily did. After getting all the information he wanted, he knowingly shrugged up his shoulders, thanked him for his politeness, and drily observed, When I have some change I'll call and take it!

New method of inoculating trees.—A common method of inoculating is by making a transverse section in the back of the stock and a perpendicular slit below it; the bud is then pushed down to give it the position which it is to have. This method is not always successful; it is better to reverse it, by making the vertical slit above the transverse section, and pushing the bud upwards into its position—a method which rarely fails of success; because as the sap descends by the bark as has been ascertained, and does not ascend, the bud thus placed above the transverse section, receives abundance, but when placed below, the sap cannot reach it.

Constitution of Spain.—The Spanish Constitution of 1812, directs that the King shall have a Council of State, composed of 40 persons—of whom four, and no more shall be Ecclesiastics, and two of these Bishops—four, and no more, shall be Grandees—and the rest shall be selected from distinguished subjects generally—12, at least, shall be born in the Provinces over sea. This Council is to be appointed by the King out of a list of 120 prepared by the Cortes. No foreigner is eligible, even though naturalized.

It would appear by an article in an English paper, that if the Constitutionalists had triumphed in Spain without a compromise with the King, he intended to have removed to Mexico.

King Ferdinand, returned to Spain from his captivity in March, 1814. He was invited to come to Madrid to accept the constitution and assume the reigns of government. He made no answer to this invitation for some time, but fixed his residence in Valencia, where the nobles and prelates gathered round him, and where many members of the Cortes, disuniting themselves, also joined him. On the fourth of May he issued a proclamation, in which he declared the Cortes an illegal body, and pronounced the constitution subversive of the regal authority. He declared that it was his royal intention not to swear or accede to the constitution, and declared it null, entirely abrogated and without any obligation on his subjects. He ordered the Cortes to cease their sittings; commanded that their place of meeting should be shut up, and declared that those who should oppose this decree should be held guilty of high treason and be punished with death. The Cortes were obliged to submit to this decree, the principle members were arrested and imprisoned, and many were banished. From that date the king has governed without regard to the Cortes or the constitution. One or two unsuccessful efforts have been made to revive the constitution, but they have been speedily subdued, and cruelly punished."
