INVITATION TO THE ROBIN ON THE APPROACH OF SPRING.

Ah! come sweet Red-breast on this spray,
Come carol forth thy hymn of day,
Come, come, upon this willow tree,
Come warble all thy notes with glee.
Now in robes of loveliest hue
Young nature doth her graces bring,
And by her blush inviteth you,
In sprightly notes to usher spring.

See the fields are turning green,
Where frost and snow was lately seen,
See the Rivers, Ponds, and Lakes
From cold winter now awakes,
And with a smile entreats your song,
In echoing sounds that gently ring
Through the Woods and trees among,
That ev'ry voice may welcome spring.

The changes of the varied year
In all her beauty doth appear,
Then sweet vis'tant will you be prest'
On yonder spray to build your nest.
Your mate can gather moss and wool,
You in the season food can bring,
Your young can drink from this clear pool,
And join their notes to hail the spring.

Come taste the sweets of morning dawn
That blushing spreads along the lawn,
Where opening plants ere long will smile
To pay the labourers daily toil.
Where he at morn doth cheerful go
With smiling hopes on promis'd wing,
Prepares his ground to plant and sow,
And gladly cheers the coming spring.

Then Man with nature should rejoice,
And thankfully raise up his voice,
To God—who sendeth heat and rain
Producing herbs, and fruit, and grain.
That bounteous hand is truely kind
Who doth the varied seasons bring,
What thanks, what praises, can we find,
To him who sends returning spring.

Horrid Murder.—The Charleston papers state, that in Beaufort county, an unfortunate negro slave, having committed the crime of being sick, was dragged out of his bedroom to the kitchen, by his master, one Samuel Lewis, who swore, that his sickness was only stubborn hypocrisy;—that he would "finish the rascal," or soon force the —— out of him; and then, after attempting to scald him, took an axe and crushed his scull! The perpetrator of the crime immediately fled from justice, and a coroner's inquest, instead of bringing in a verdict of "wilful murder," has declared merely, "that the deceased came to his death in consequence of sundry blows of an axe, inflicted on his neck and head by the hands of his master, Samuel Lewis." We regret to add, that the murderer has left an amiable wife, lately the mother of an infant, lying sick even unto death. "Such are some of thy fruits, accursed slavery!"

Another. The Winchester (Virginia) Gazette gives the particulars of a runaway negro having been whipped to death by his master, and left on the road.

Tit for Tat.

A Kentucky paper, throwing back the sarcasm of some of our Eastern prints, advising the Banks of Kentucky and Ohio "to redeem their notes with hams and potatoes," recommends that the Banks of Hallowell & Augusta, Wiscasset and Castine, redeem their's with "laths, shingles, codfish and onions," and for small change, with "herrings." This is a fair and palpable hit.

"Those who live in house of glass,
Should not throw stones at those who pass."
