LONDON,

HOUSE OF COMMONS, May 30.

TIMBER DUTIES.

Mr J. GRANT begged to know whether it was the intention of Ministers in the next session again to bring forward the subject of timber duties. He might be excused for putting this question, as he found, from what had passed in another place, that ministers were not at all agreed, regarding the bill which had recently passed. It was said that half a loaf was better than no bread:
and perhaps half a bill was better than no measure at all.

Mr. F. ROBINSON said that it was not the intention of Ministers to propose any additional measure in the next session.
He admitted that the bill just passed did not precisely come up to his views, but could give no pledge to follow it up on any future occasion.

Mr. J. P. GRANT then gave notice, that early in the next session he would again bring forward the question of the timber duties.
