

believe that any other person would submit it. I do not intend to draw any invidious comparisons between the settlers of Madawaska, and those below the Falls, although I am by no means apprehensive that we would suffer by it, but it certainly was not a very superior act of Policy in Mr. Coffin, to attempt to widen a Breach, (which is already but too great) by representing persons who had never done him an injury, and with very few of whom he was personally acquainted, as being unworthy of being received into the Family of Man; a man of an ordinary understanding would have suppressed that part, if even it was his opinion, because he would know that it must undoubtedly exasperate the minds of those whom it was his interest rather to conciliate.

I would therefore advise Mr. Coffin, for the sake of his own reputation, that when he is again deputed upon a business of so much real importance, he will either make a more minute personal enquiry into the case, or at all events not collect the miserable and absurd representations of every abandoned scoundrel, and publish them in his own name.

I have now only to say that some person who is capable of doing Justice to this subject, will before the Public in such a manner as it deserves, and I am satisfied that it will not be regarded by the Americans as a General attack upon them, because they are aware that Mr. Coffin's assertions are false, nor would they expect that we will offer ourselves to be wantonly insulted without expressing some marks of resentment.

Kent, March 9, 1826. M.

The Frederickton Society for the encouragement of good and honest Female Servants.

In order that no misapprehensions may arise as to the objects and intentions of this Society, it is deemed necessary to publish the Rules and Regulations again with explanatory notes.

Rules & Regulations.

1st. "The object of this Society is to encourage and reward such Female Servants, as can produce satisfactory Testimonials of their general good conduct for two years last past, having lived in one place twelve months of that period."

NOTE.—Any person now living with a member of this Society, who can immediately bring from her Mistress such certificate, or who may at any future period become entitled thereto, shall be rewarded accordingly.

2d. "Any particular acts of honesty and diligence shall be rewarded in a higher degree, and the rewards be proportioned according to the length of service over and above two years."

NOTE.—Whenever any Servant shows herself worthy of trust, by the faithful discharge of any duty imposed upon her, she shall be rewarded; and in proportion to her length of service.

3d. "Every encouragement shall be held out to Female Servants to resort to Frederickton and its vicinity, and a donation presented to all such as come well recommended, after a probation of one year."

NOTE.—By this it is to be understood, that a donation shall be given to all Female Emigrants and Strangers who may be engaged as Servants by any member of this Society, who bring with them good recommendations, and prove themselves answerable thereto, after one years trial.

4th. "No Member of this Society shall receive any Female Servant without a written character from her last place, or personal application to her late Mistress."

NOTE.—This Rule does not bind any member to reject a Servant, who has not lived twelve months in one place, but it compels her to demand a character before she receives her; and the reasonable conclusion is, that no respectable Mistress of a Family will receive a Servant who has been turned out of service elsewhere, for theft, dishonesty, or any malpractice. And it is of course, at the option of the Mistress, to take any stranger upon trial, or any Female who may never have been out at service before.

5th. "All acts of dishonesty, insolvency, and disobedience, shall be punished by public disgrace."

NOTE.—That is, the name of all such offenders shall (as the aggrieved party think fit) be published, and the offenders themselves, executed at the Law.

6th. "The period for distributing rewards shall be the month of December, except in particular cases, to be appointed by a Committee appointed for the purpose by the Lady Patrons and Directors; they themselves always forming a part."

7th. "The terms of admission into this Society shall be as follow:—Half a Guinea be paid on entrance—and not less than a Guinea annually, to be paid on or before the first day of December."

8th. "And whose names are hereunto subscribed shall be themselves firmly bound by the foregoing Rules."
