ILLNESS AND DEATH OF
MR. CANNING.

From the St. James' Chronicle.

Mr. Canning is dangerously, we fear we must say hopelessly indisposed. An affliction of the stomach, from which he has suffered for some time, assumed about a month ago a more alarming character, and within the last three days the symptoms have been aggravated to a degree, that, to use the language of the three physicians attending the distinguished patient, place "his life in urgent danger." All who are acquainted with the proper delicacy observed by medical men, in pronouncing upon the state of a patient an unfavourable opinion, which must reach the ears of friends and relations, will give a melancholy interpretation to the bulletin of last night.

(From the Courier of Monday.)

We lament to say that Mr. Canning's illness has alarmingly increased, and his life... a life most important to his country, and not to his country alone... is pronounced by his physicians to be in a imminent danger. The following bulletins reached Downing-street yesterday:

(From the Courier of Tuesday.)

We wish it were in our power to say one word which could diminish the intense anxiety which is felt, respecting the situation of this illustrious Statesman: but our hopes, and those of the country, are confined to the simple fact that while life remains there exists the bare possibility that death may not take place. The state of bodily exhaustion to which he is reduced, as well from the excruciating pain which he has suffered, as from the severe remedies necessarily employed to abate the inflammation, has left him but little strength with which to protract the struggle. So great was this sinking of physical energy during the night, that we understand the Physicians, who were in attendance, expected, from two o'clock till between six and seven, that every moment would terminate the melancholy scene; but about the latter hour he rallied again, and so continued during the morning. At eight o'clock this morning the following bulletin was issued:—

CHISWICK, EIGHT O'CLOCK, A. M.

Mr. Canning's state of danger is still more urgent than at the time of the last night's Report.

"M. J. TIERNEY,

"J. R. FARRE,

"H. HOLLAND."

His bodily sufferings have diminished during yesterday and to day, and he now only complains of great soreness in those parts where the pain was most dreadful.

The internal inflammation is so general, extending over the whole trunk, that his medical attendants have been unable to determine what particular part may have been more immediately the seat of his disease, whether the inflammation has affected the lungs, the pleura, the liver, the kidneys, or the intestines, with greater or less violence.

Since writing the above we have received accounts from Chiswick, dated half-past one. They state that Mr. Canning is not worse since the morning; that is, since the period when he rallied in the way we have already described.

A Cabinet Council has been summoned to assemble at the Foreign Office to day at 4 o'clock.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE OF THE STATE OF THE PRIME MINISTER.

The anxiety manifested in the city is quite indescribable. The following has been circulated in various quarters:—
