

FREDERICTON.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.

Observations on the Proceedings of the House of Assembly, and Extracts from the Journals.

Circumstances prevented our noticing the transactions of the Legislature, now in Session, at an earlier period: but as the delay was occasioned by the indispensable publication of matter of, perhaps, no less importance, any other apology would be superfluous.

We now advert to the subject, and intend to continue our notes and extracts during the sitting of the House, in as regular a manner as the arrangements of our Paper will permit. The Proceedings must of necessity be abridged, altho' we will endeavour to publish all that may appear to concern the more particular interests of the Province.

Our readers already know that the House met on the 8th ult.: they have also been furnished with His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the Legislature; the Addresses of the Council and House of Assembly in reply; together with His Excellency's Answers: and the spirit of unanimity that prevailed these addresses, with the general disposition of the Legislative Body to second, by their best exertions, measures which have been dictated by sound wisdom, and an enlightened perception of the advantages as well as necessities, of this Province, have doubtless met with that warm approbation from the Inhabitants of New-Brunswick, which their loyal and affectionate tone so justly merit. It is, consequently, useless for us to make any other remarks thereon. We proceed then to the Journals.

Thursday 8th Feb. 1827.

Mr. Johnston moved for leave to bring in a bill to amend an Act intituled "An Act for ascertaining damages on Protested Bills of Exchange." Leave granted.

On this subject we take the following Extract from a Letter to the Editor of the St. John Courier on the 24th ult.

"As to the damages as assessed by our Provincial Law, I never heard an objection, say 10 per cent.; but as Bills for two or three years past, have been disposed of at a premium, a question has arisen, whether such premium, together with the legal damages, and all other necessary expenses, should, in case of a Bill being dishonoured, be paid back with what is called the face of the Bill, to the purchaser. In Law, my opinion is, the purchaser is not entitled to have the premium returned to him. It is well known that Bills, like other merchantable commodities, fluctuate in value;—Sometimes they bear a premium, and sometimes they are sold at a discount. Our existing Law provides no remedy in either case.—So far, I contend that it is defective. As regards equity, that is another consideration.

"I am not aware of the nature of the proposed amendment to the Law respecting Bills of Exchange:—My opinion on the subject, however, is simply this—that the purchaser of a Bill of Exchange, should, in the event of its being dishonoured, be borne harmless on its return, as to its value in the place on which it is drawn, exclusive of the expences necessarily incurred in returning it, interest, and reasonable damages:—When I say reasonable damages, I mean such damages as may by our Legislature be fixed upon: for if a Law be made at all, a line in this instance must be drawn, otherwise there is no use of a Law at all on the subject;—for in that case, every merchant when he buys or sells a Bill of Exchange, can for himself have a written agreement signed, sealed and delivered, just as he could have upon any other contract:—I will suppose a case—A, of St. John, draws a Bill for £100 s/g. on his correspondent B, of London: C purchases this Bill, at the rate of ten per cent premium, and pays A for it accordingly £122 4 5 1/2 currency. The Bill is dishonoured, and by the time it returns here the current rate of exchange on London, is ten per cent discount. Would it be fair, in such case, to demand a return of the ten per cent premium? I should think not. This would be making A pay too dearly for his misfortune, and at the same time, putting twenty per cent of clear profit into the pocket of C; which (if damages are allowed besides) is surely more than the nature of such a transaction could be expected to yield.—The principle of equity, I think, would require of A, on the return of the Bill, either to furnish C with another Bill of £100 s/g. (and such Bill as C, should consider good,) or else pay him such sum of money as will purchase one at the Current rate of Exchange, besides Interest, expences, together with such reasonable damages as a Law made to assess them, may direct.

No one could object in justice to paying damages; but as the actual amount of damages sustained, may vary according to circumstances, it will require a good deal of consideration to fix the amount by Law, in order to answer the purposes and nature of the general Trade of the Province."

The Act alluded to by the honourable Member for St. John, runs thus—

"I. Be it enacted by the Governor, Council and Assembly, that from and after the first day of April, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-six, all Bills of Exchange drawn from and after said time by persons residing within this Province upon Persons in Europe, that may be sent back protested, shall be subject to ten per cent. damages, together with the accustomed charge of protesting and postage, and also six per cent. per annum interest on the amount of principal, damages and charges, to commence from the day of the date of the protest on said Bill for non-payment; and continue till the same is paid.

"II. And be it further enacted, That all Bills of Exchange drawn by persons residing within this Province after said time, on persons in any part of America and the West Indies, and sent back protested, shall be subject to five per cent. damages, together with the accustomed charges of protest and postage, and also six per cent. per annum interest &c.

"III. And be it further enacted, That all Bills drawn, or endorsed by persons not residing in this Province, and who at any time may be found therein, shall be subject to the same damages charges, and interest, as if the same had been drawn or endorsed by persons who actually did reside in the Province.
