

this high source, could not fail to produce the most powerful effect.

ON that other main branch of our well being, the Fisheries, which I earnestly recommend you to encourage with your continued bounty, the Country will do well to engage an increased degree of enterprise.

I RECOMMEND generally to your attention, all the other objects of public utility which have heretofore been sustained by the Legislature. Among these, the Institutions of Education and Learning will I am sure maintain their distinguished place.

I SHALL cause to be laid before you Reports and Abstracts which will, I trust, show, that progress has been made in a system which I have been endeavouring to introduce for better regulating all that concerns the laying out and formation of the Great Roads, and in preventing improvident expenditure of the Public Money in this important, and very complicated branch of the public service. I am confident that a concurrent provision on your part, in pursuing, steadily and uniformly, the course which it is proposed to follow, will be productive of substantial advantage, by maturing and rendering permanent, the results of actual experience, and presenting these results for general adoption, under the guidance of an established system founded upon them.

ANY further communications that may appear to me to be necessary to make, I shall convey to you by Message during the Session.

I REPOSE full confidence in your wisdom and zeal; and entertaining the most ardent desire that these may continue to inspire and guide you in deliberating with uninterrupted harmony on measures calculated to promote the public prosperity and happiness, I shall be ready, with my concurrence, to give effect to whatever may appear capable of ensuring objects and blessings which it is my fervent wish may be fully realized to all the people of New-Brunswick, and their descendants.

From the Moniteur of Monday, Dec. 3.
NON OFFICIAL PART.

Constantinople, Nov. 10 — On the 6th news was received at Constantinople that Fabvier, supported by Lord Cochrane, had made a landing on the Isle of Scio, and that the Pacha and the Turks had been obliged to retire into fort.

The news of this expedition, in which the Turks suspected the Allies of having taken part, arrived while the Divan was deliberating, on the steps to be taken in consequence of events at Navarin, and it greatly increased the irritation already felt.

The Reis Effendi declared, on the 6th, to the Dragomans of England, France, and Russia, "That all intercourse between the Porte and the Representatives of the three Courts were suspended till the moment when it should be known whether they (the Courts) desisted from all interference in the affairs of Greece — whether his Sublimity should receive an indemnity for the losses and damage caused by the destruction of his fleet — and whether he should receive satisfaction for the insult which had been offered him." This declaration produced on the 6th an answer from the Ambassadors, which is believed to contain the demand of their passports.

It was affirmed, that on the very day when the Turkish declaration was made to the Dragomans of the Allied Courts, the Reis Effendi caused a note to be delivered to the Austrian Internuncio, in which the Porte, protesting its desire to remain at peace with the Allied Powers, notwithstanding the affair at Navarin, requested the mediation of Austria. It was said that the conditions fixed by the Porte for this reconciliation with the Powers appeared of such a nature that they would not be accepted.

According to letters from Smyrna of the 6th, Admiral de Rigay was there with part of his squadron, and had taken with the ships of war of all the nations, and with the consent of the Pacha, a position, which enabled him to protect the European merchants and the Franks, in case the Mussulman population should be disposed to acts of violence towards them. However all was tranquil, and the Pacha maintained perfect order.

It was the same at Constantinople, where Turkish Authorities are observed to take every precaution to prevent any interruption of order and tranquility. Meantime the Ambassadors, and the subjects of their nations, were making every preparation for their embarkation and departure.

At Constantinople the greatest activity prevailed in the arsenals to prepare for war. Orders have been sent to all the provinces to call upon the Mussulmans to defend their laws and their religion.

The Imperial Palace at Adrianople was preparing to receive the Sultan, who will go there when he puts himself at the head of the army.

Troops and ammunition have been sent to Silistria to put the fortresses on the Danube in a state of defence. The principal cities are given up as not capable of being defended.

The Gazette de France of Tuesday contains the above articles from the Moniteur. It has also a long article on the Elections, in defence of M. de Villele; "who," he says, "will re-enter the Chamber of Deputies, and there, surrounded by numerous friends, he will preserve, by the ascendancy of his talent and his unvarying moderation, the influence he has always exercised."

CRIMINAL LAW.

Mary Somerton, v. Rex.

This was a Writ of Error, brought to reverse the judgment which had been pronounced in the case of Mary Somerton, sentenced to 14 years' transportation, for stealing several articles from her master, while in his employ.

And the question was, whether an aver-ment that the act was committed "on the same day that she was in service," was a sufficient averment that the act was committed at the time when she was in his service."

Lord TENTERDEN said, that in his opinion the judgment pronounced in this case must be confirmed. It was necessary for Judges to be extremely careful not to expose themselves to that reproach, by which according to the observation of a learned and humane Judge, "criminals were allowed to escape, by nice and captious objections to forms."

The other Judges agreed in this opinion, and the judgment was unanimously affirmed.
