HOWARD DOUGLAS.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS the General Assembly of this Province stands prorogued to Thursday the twenty fourth day of this instant January: I have thought fit further to prorogue the said General Assembly, and the same is hereby further prorogued to Thursday the fourteenth day of February next—then to meet at Fredericton for the dispatch of business.

Given under my Hand and Seal at Fredericton, the fifth day of January, in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight, and in the eighth Year of His Majesty's Reign.

By His Excellency's Command. WM. F. ODELL.

It will be observed by the above Proclamation that His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, has further prorogued the General Assembly from the 24th instant, to the 14th day of February next, then to meet at Fredericton for the dispatch of business.

It was with extreme regret we learnt, that on Friday last, His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, while walking in his garden, happening to step on a piece of ice, suddenly fell, by which His Excellency's face was severely cut in one or two places, and His Excellency's right wrist dislocated:—But we are happy to understand that from the violence of the concussion, His Excellency has sustained no other apparent injury. This misfortune, in His Excellency's weak state, must evidently tend to check, in some degree, His Excellency's recovery from his former illness; but we earnestly hope not very materially. Had not a kind and watchful Providence interposed, from the manner in which His Excellency fell, in his feeble state, the consequences might have been too melancholy to think of. We are happy to add, however, that His Excellency is now in a fair way to do well.

The reports of Lady Douglas for the last few days, are, we are thankful to say, encouraging....and tho' yet in a doubtful situation, we trust through the blessing of God, her valuable life will be preserved to us.

Last week the Office of the Secretary of the New Brunswick Agricultural and Emigrant Society, was broken into, and robbed of a considerable sum of money, which had been there deposited to pay for Grants of Land. We are sorry to add that the perpetrators of this daring robbery have not yet been discovered; but as crimes so atrocious seldom escape punishment, even in this world, we have hopes, that they will not be able much longer to evade the arm of justice. The villains passed through several doors of the building, in one of the wings of which was the Office, which they entered by cutting a pannel out of the door leading from the Office into the principal building. It is evident, from the strict search the thieves had made, and the great number of papers opened by them, that they had taken some time to effect their diabolical purpose: they left behind them the two Chisels with which they had cut out the pannel and forced the locks of a chest, drawers, &c.

A large Reward will be given to any one who will give such information as will lead to the conviction of the Robbers; and every honest man in the community must sincerely wish that they may be discovered and suffer that punishment they so richly deserve.

Those who have resided many years in this Province, cannot but look back with regret to those better days, when it was not necessary even to fasten their doors; and when property was safe without being secured by locks and bolts. The repeated attempts which of late have been made upon several public offices, as well as upon private houses and stores, show, with a degree of certainty, which it is so painful to contemplate, that there is in this Town a gang of wretches as daring and as wicked as can perhaps be found on the face of the earth.

Having in previous numbers quoted some accounts of the proceedings in Lower Canada, when His Excellency the Governor-in-Chief rejected the nomination of Mr. Papineau, as Speaker of the House of Assembly; we in this number present our readers with an able and perspicuous article from the Quebec Official Gazette on the subject of that rejection; an attentive perusal of which, we imagine, must convince every sensible and unprejudiced mind of the folly of those persons who persisted in the nomination of one so pointedly disapproved of by the Executive. The article is rather lengthy, but as the facts and precedents it embraces are of so important a nature on this question, we thought it best to give it an entire insertion; having for our object in so doing, simply to furnish the uninformed with the most authentic information on a subject which we know has created so much general discussion.

We hope our friend "Juvenis" will be pleased with our attention to his favor, in having published it at his earnest desire. Altho', perhaps, it is to be regretted that he should have "applied" himself so much to "idleness;" it nevertheless seems praiseworthy in him to wish to divert the attention of others from such a "wrongful application" of their time—while we confess we never heard, till Juvenis informed us, that it required much "application" to be "an Idler." We must, however, in fairness notice Juvenis's second communication, in which he suggests one or two alterations in the first; which makes us believe, what before we could hardly credit; viz. that Juvenis is actually serious:—But as the proposed amendments would not affect the general tenor of the whole, we therefore considered it would have been, in our opinion, a "wrongful application" of our time to have troubled ourselves about it. When Juvenis "hurled before his imagination" the "awkward appearance" he cut, "and then laid across the Master's chair to receive REMUNERATION!"—he must, we think, have had an oddly looking object to contemplate; but how he managed to arrest its flight while it was "hurling before his imagination"—to allow him time to view it!—we cannot just now very well conjecture. Perhaps, however, it is, after all, a figurative expression only; and Juvenis may have thought himself as much at liberty to "hurl" himself—in half buff—before his imagination, as in a more comely dress. But not to keep our readers in suspense, we hasten to present Juvenis's favor for their inspection, and we trust they will not receive it the less courteously for being on the wing.

MR EDITOR,

SIR,

Please insert the following if it meets with your approbation—I trust it will.

Worthy reader—if ever in passing the Parish School house, where the minutiae, but essential parts of thine education, were instilled into thy brain, under the freedom of Book and Birch; thou hast reflected upon the days, weeks, &ceteras, spent there in youthful happiness.—Compare thy reflections with mine.—If they do not agree, thou hast been stoutheaded; but if they agree, thou hast been like myself...an idler.

In passing the School house one day last week, my ears were assailed with the exclamations of the prisoners of a school room, released for a time, from that (supposed by them to be) chamber of despotism.—That many of you...thought I...have an inward aversion from the toils of the book...cannot be doubted.—When I looked upon the lawn fronting the School house, clothed with its annual mantle of snow...when I took an ocular survey, of the different houses, &c. in the vicinity...all my mispent hours, were brought to my recollection; and my heart recoiled within me, when I reflected, upon the manner, in which I had abused the most precious part of my time. I could not look upon the School house, without hurling before my imagination the awkward appearance I had often made within its walls by APPLYING MYSELF TO IDLENESS, instead of my books; and as a natural consequence the still more awkward appearance I made, when laid across the Master's chair, to receive REMUNERATION for my wrongful application...I could not even look upon the Bell, which had so often summoned me before the des-
