

scene, by firing a feu de joie; and in the evening there will be a ball, at which His Excellency, Lady Harvey and suite, are expected to attend, when there will be recreation enough for one evening, for the fair portion of our city. We hope that on this day Phœbus will shed his enchanting rays over hill and dale with uncommon lustre, when the sceptical will see if 'nothing will be done!'—St. John City Gazette.

FIRE.—On Friday evening last, a small house in Portland, near Fort Howe, caught fire by means of a stove pipe having been put through the end of the house, and the space around the pipe filled with rags.—The wind blowing with considerable violence, the fire made rapid progress, and from the difficulty of obtaining water, there was danger of its communicating to other buildings in the vicinity; but prompt assistance being rendered by persons who repaired to the spot with one of the Engines from the city, the fire was soon extinguished, not however before it had materially injured the house. His Honor the Speaker of the House of Assembly, exerted himself greatly, and was exposed to considerable danger having got on the roof of the building and the fire having nearly burned it through, it gave way beneath him, but providentially he escaped without injury. We have often observed the active and persevering exertions of that Gentleman on similar occasions. The house was owned by Mr. Crozier of this city.—Id.

Preparations, we are pleased to find, are being made, for laying the Corner Stone of the Building about to be erected by the Mechanics' Institute in this City, with due ceremony, in about ten days. It is proposed to have a 'Trades' Procession on the occasion, and we understand His Excellency Sir John Harvey has signified his intention of being present and taking part in the interesting proceedings of the day.—Courier.

The 11th Regiment, whose departure we noticed on Tuesday last, is again, it appears, shortly to return to this garrison, for the purpose of embarking for their native land, from which, in various Colonial stations, they have long been absent. They are to take passage in the Apollon, troop ship, now on her way from Halifax, with the 56th Regiment, from Jamaica. This is to them, no doubt, as it naturally must be, a subject of congratulation, and it would, therefore, be selfish to regret their departure; they will have the satisfaction of carrying with them the best wishes of the citizens of Quebec, by whom the conduct of both Officers and men will long be held in pleasurable remembrance. Their embarkation for other posts in this province, on Tuesday last, sufficiently marked the cordiality which subsisted between this gallant Regiment and the Coldstream Guards, the flutes and drums of the latter, having, to use the soldier's phrase "played them down" to the place of embarkation, to which they were also accompanied by that distinguished Officer, Major General Sir James Macdonell, Commanding the Garrison and District. A number of civilians were likewise on the wharf, to take leave of the corps which has rendered itself so generally and deservedly popular. This last removal affords another proof of the locomotive fate, if we may use the expression, which has attended the North Devon, since their arrival on this continent: they have been constantly marching and counter-marching in New Brunswick and Canada, detached, and apart, yet, to their credit be it said, whenever brought together, their appearance and discipline on the parade, and the whole of their internal economy and equipment, has been such as to call down the highest praise from the experienced Officers under whose inspection they have passed, on the perfection in which the discipline and interior arrangement of the Regiment have been preserved under the trying circumstances to which they have been exposed, by Colonel Goldie, C. B. who has commanded them, and by the Officers of the corps, who have so faithfully seconded his exertions. We, on our part, but echo the wishes of all who have known them in Canada, in tendering our best wishes that all happiness may attend them on their return to their native land, and in whatever quarter the chances of the service may throw them. It is, nevertheless, a matter of regret that they should, on the eve of their departure from Canada, have been subjected to the short, yet, as it now appears, the unnecessary voyage they have been embarked on, from circumstances beyond the control of powers in this command.—Quebec Mercury.

The Grenadier Guards disembarked yesterday afternoon from the steamboat British America; they made a fine appearance, and were met on the wharf by Major General Sir James Macdonell, accompanied by his Staff, and proceeded to the barracks in the citadel which they are to occupy, the Coldstreams being quartered in the Jesuits' Barrack. The appearance of this fine Battalion has lost nothing by its sojourn and service in various parts of Lower Canada, and they re-entered the Upper Town, at Prescott Gate, with as imposing and soldier-like an aspect as they did on the day of their disembarkation from Europe, in 1838.—Id.

It is our painful task to record the very sudden death of Lieutenant Colonel Lyster of the Grenadier Guards, which took place this morning at the Globe Hotel. The Lieutenant Colonel arrived yesterday in command of the Battalion of Grenadiers, and rode at his head from the wharf to the citadel, where he dismissed the parade, and, though very weak, when he alighted at his Hotel, was able to transact some necessary Regimental business, and retired to bed, expressing a hope that a night's rest would enable him to attend the Regimental parade in the morning. About eight o'clock his servant entered the room, and first imagined that his master was asleep, but listening more attentively, he was alarmed at hearing a gurgling sound, and, on opening the curtains, found Colonel Lyster at the last extremity. Medical aid was immediately sent for, and was promptly at hand, but, ere the professional attendants arrived, life was extinct. Lieutenant Colonel Lyster entered the Guards at an early period of life, and was well known and highly esteemed in the courtly and most fashionable circles of the metropolis. He was greatly beloved by his brother officers, and his unlooked for decease has cast a general gloom over the garrison.—Id.

Yesterday afternoon, at three o'clock, the mortal remains of Lieutenant Colonel Lyster, of the Grenadier Guards, were removed from the Globe Hotel, (Mr. Schlep's) to the Protestant burial ground, in St John Suburb, where they were deposited in the vault, belonging to Henry Jessop, Esquire, Collector of the Customs. The military honours due to the rank of the deceased were observed, but the day was unusually stormy, a heavy rain falling during the whole time, the mournful procession was moving, and rendering it less imposing than it would otherwise have been. The body was removed from his late lodgings to the Cathedral where the impressive funeral service of the Established Church was read by the Rev. H. Cowell, Chaplain to the Forces: this ended the procession reformed and proceeded to the place of interment. Lieutenant Colonel Greenwood of the Grenadier Guards was the chief mourner, supported by Lieutenant Colonel Cranford of the same Regiment, with Lieutenant Colonel the Hon. T. Ashburnham, of the Coldstream Guards, and the pall was borne by Colonel Bowles, Lieutenant Colonels Chaplin, Hay, Codrington and Hope of the Coldstream and Captain Thornton of the Grenadier Guards. The firing party composed of three hundred men of the Grenadiers, was commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Percival of that corps. The whole of the Garrison off duty attended the funeral, and, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather, a large concourse assembled to witness the solemn and melancholy ceremony. The deceased Colonel Lyster was highly esteemed in his Regiment and by a numerous circle of friends in England; and the regret for his death is heightened by the reflection that he was cut off in the prime of life, his age being but thirty nine years.—Id.
