CONSCIENCE.
Thy voice I hear, thy form I see,
Which none can witness save myself and thee!

Whilst o'er the bed of innocence
Sweet sleep its influence pours,
And calmly and serenely pass
The darksome midnight hours;
Guilt, on its fevered couch, in woe,
Disquietude and care,
Seeks vainly for the soothing balm,
For CONSCIENCE murmurs there!

The gay coquette, before her glass,
Beholds in dark array,
A lengthened train of mispent hours
Amidst the vain and gay;
The madd'ning blush o'er spreads her cheek,
Changed is her life's gay dream,
Fear occupies the place of joy—
'Tis CONSCIENCE paints the scene!

The wandering traveller roaming far,
In strange and foreign climes;
The peasant in his lowly cot,
Where fragrant woodbine twines;
The monarch on his lofty throne,
Where smiles make crowds rejoice,
All hear the sound and feel the power
Of CONSCIENCE' warning voice!

Oh! reader, then, whoever thou art,
Should pleasure call away,
And with its siren tones attempt
To exercise its sway;
Should fair and glittering scenes enthrall
Thy spirit's youthful peace,
Persist not in thy pleasing course
If CONSCIENCE bids thee cease.

Miscellaneous.

A DINNER AT A HONG MERCHANT'S HOUSE.—On dinner being announced, we were conducted to a circular table, and each of us prepared with a pair of ivory chopsticks, mounted with silver, a silver ladle with the handle much curved, a small cup of soy, a saucer or stand for the bowls out of which we were to eat, and an elegant silver cup richly gilt, with two handles, mounted on a stand of similar material, and resembling in form an inverted saucer. This cup was used for drinking soy-sung, the wine of the country, and did not contain more than the old fashioned Chinese tea-cup; but after drinking the health of one of the party, it was usual to turn the inside of the cup towards him to show that it was empty. The wine was presented to us boiling hot, and our cups replenished at every remove. In addition to the above, each European was supplied with a knife and fork, and some bread. The table was laid out with eight small dishes, containing articles to whet the appetite, such as cold dried pork, called chin-chew, grated so fine that it resembled red-coloured wool; some chips of dried salt fish and ham; roast chicken, cut into small pieces shaped like dice; pig's tongue; salt fish, torn into shreds like flax; legs of ducks, cured in the same manner as hams, and a salad, composed of greens, onions, garlic, salt fish, and eggs, mixed up with tea oil. These delicacies were cold, remaining on the table throughout the entertainment, and were paid uncommon attention to by the Chinese at every opportunity afforded them by the removal of the bowls. The dinner commenced with a large bowl of bird's-nest soup, from which each person helped himself. We found it very insipid until flavoured with soy, and as the necessary condiments of salt and pepper seem to be wholly neglected in Chinese cookery. The second dish was shark's-fin soup with balls of crab, followed by divers others, among which was a vegetable soup, made of prepared sea-weed from the coast of Japan. This weed, which is called tay-choey, resembles, in its dried state, the pitch found in the hollow of a quill, but, in the soup, its state is similar to that of celery; there were also in this soup slices of young bamboo, and roots of white water lily, each having a peculiar and agreeable flavour. After the soups came stewed mutton, cut as fine and tender as vermicelli—the gravy delicious. This was followed by roasted pigeons' eggs in a very rich gravy. We found it no easy matter, however, to transfer these eggs from the bowl to our cups by means of the chopsticks. The Chinese do not clean or change their chopsticks during dinner, but each thrusts his own into every dish, and helps himself throughout the repast. They also consider it excessively polite to help a foreigner with their chopsticks, after having eaten with them themselves from various dishes. Next came roasted pork, the skin of which was served up by itself as a peculiar delicacy, having been fried brown in fat, and cut into squares. Roast capons followed, and were found exceedingly tender, having been fed on ground rice. Stewed teal was then served, followed by stewed pigeons, mushrooms, duck's feet, and a numberless variety of dishes, of the names of many of which we were, of course, ignorant. At the conclusion a large bowl of rice was served up, as hot as possible, with sundry square pieces of salt fish to give it a relish.—Holman's Travels.

One of the heaviest of the heavy German soldiers had the duty of mounting guard at one of the ducal hunting seats; and, not to perplex the poor fellow, one single notion, and no more, was rammed into his noddle—namely, that he must present arms to the duke, should his highness pass that way. He was then left to his cogitations, which, we need hardly say, were of that class described by Dibdin in his song of "The Jolly young Waterman," who, we are told, was "thinking of nothing at all." Tired of this transcendental monotony, the man had recourse to the universal German solace—his sausages and his schnapps. The better to enjoy these he laid his firelock on the grass, and, lolling against a tree, discussed his creature comforts with due voracity. While thus engaged, he saw an unpretending person approach, dressed in the common German hunting dress—a sort of green smock-frock, leathers, and continuations. "Good appetite to you," said the new-comer; "what are you eating?" "Guess!" gruffly answered the peasant soldier. "Oh, perhaps Rothwurst?" said the duke (for the sportsman was no less a personage.) "No; something better than that!" "Probably Leberwurst?" No; something better than that!" "Probably Metwurst?" Rothwurst, Leberwurst, and Metwurst may be called the positive comparative and superlative degree of the Germans sausage. "Yes. And, now you know all about my sausage, pray who are you?" "Guess!" said the Duke. "Oh, perhaps you're one of the Duke's pages?" No! something better than that." Then you may be one of his aide-de-camps in disguise?" No; something better than that." "Perhaps you're the Duke himself?" "Yes." Then just hold my sausage a moment—for my orders are to present arms to you." The Duke always related this anecdote with infinite glee.

THE ALBERT BONNET.—Last autumn, when Prince Albert was on a visit preliminary to the British Court, the young Queen and he used frequently to wander amongst the shady-wooded walks of Windsor. On one occasion, on returning, her bonnet was slightly bent back round its front, the Prince it appears had been thinking more of the woman than the Queen, as a gallant Knight should, and had in some pressing attentions to the Queen, committed a slight trespass upon her milinery. The young ladies of the court perceived at once the slight derangement, but were delighted with the improvement, and immediately as soon as etiquette permitted, hurried to their miliners, gave orders for the new fashion of bonnet with turned back fronts, and secured their Royal Mistress in her future little wanderings from betraying appearances—for where all were alike there could be no suspicion of particularity. Such was the origin of the Albert Bonnet, and so attractive and becoming is the fashion in the bright eyes of young ladies, that, like its origin, it is now almost universal.
