THE QUEEN.

Joy to the Ocean Queen!
Peril and pain are o'er;
And shouts are heard between
The cannons' lordly roar.
To hail the Royal stranger
A nation's welcome springs,
Saved, in the hour of danger,
By the hand that ruleth Kings.

Joy to the Ocean Isle!
Glad bells the tidings sped,
And lighted up a smile
Far as the echoes fled.
They brighten starlike glances,
In the Peer's proud hall of might;
And the peasant mother dances
Her infant in delight.

Forth the good tidings flew,
Borne by each snow-white sail;
And tribes of every hue
The glad event shall hail.
Far as floats the British Lion,
Glad faces shall be seen,
To hail the Royal Scion,
To cry, "God save the Queen."

Yes; nor let idle tone
Pollute that solemn prayer!
The Heavens are His throng,
Who makes our realm His care.
Kings rule by His direction;
Still may His hand be seen
To compass with protection
Our country and our Queen!

Miscellaneous.

SINGULAR THEFTS BY A LADY.—Within the last few days a number of very clever and audacious thefts have been perpetrated in Glasgow, under circumstances which led to the conclusion that they have been committed by a female, who, on the supposition that she is the guilty party, must have carried into the execution of them an average share of impudence and fashionable address. The following, so far as we can learn, are the particulars of this singular affair: It appears that on Thursday last a lady drove up to one of our most respectable hotels in a noddy, having just arrived, as she intimated, by one of the coaches from Edinburgh. She asked for a Sir John Ferguson, seemed disappointed that he was not at the inn to meet her, and having taken a bed room and parlour remained all night. She made some enquiries in reference to the residence of Lord Kelburne, to whom, she said, she was about to pay a visit; and on Friday left the hotel, and entered one of the Paisley railway omnibuses, with the view, as she stated, of going by railway, information having been given her, she alleged, that that was the best mode of reaching his lordship's residence. Here it is necessary to state, that on Friday morning a gentleman who had slept in the inn discovered that, during the night, his pockets had been picked of £12, £7 of which were in notes, and £5 in sovereigns. The notes had been wrapped up in a £20 note; but, as the latter had a mark upon it which might have led to a discovery, it was left behind by the thief; and in the place of the five sovereigns some silver was substituted. In a room on the flat above, another gentleman had a £5 Bank of England note taken from his pocket, and three sovereigns from a purse, into which, in lieu of the sovereigns, three shillings had been dropped. These mysterious thefts created "quite a sensation" in the hotel; no one dreamed of blaming a lady, who expected a visit from Sir John Ferguson, and was on terms of intimacy with my Lord Kelburne—the gentlemen who slept in the inn could not for a moment be supposed guilty of a theft—and, as is very usual under similar circumstances, suspicion began to be directed to one or other of the servants. Towards evening information of the thefts was left at the Police Office, and Captain Miller made a personal investigation into the matter. Having ascertained that a lady had slept in the inn, and finding, from inquiry, that this very lady who was supposed on a visit at Lord Kelburne's, had taken up her residence at another respectable inn in the city, he began to see his way somewhat clearly in the affair. He ascertained that the lady had gone to another hotel about two hours after she had left the first one, so that it was rendered doubtful whether she had gone by the railway at all, as she had stated to be her intention, and, at all events, certain that she had not paid a visit to Lord Kelburne. At the second hotel she had also ordered a parlour and bedroom, and intimated her intention of remaining over night. She sent one of the waiters to take an inside seat in the six o'clock morning coach to Edinburgh, and directed a noddy to be in waiting to convey her to the coach at the proper hour on Saturday morning. Having ascertained these particulars, Captain Miller adopted two precautionary measures to secure the detection and apprehension of the lady, should she turn out to be the thief. He wrote to the Edinburgh Police, intimating that a female might probably arrive in that city by the six o'clock coach, strongly suspected of theft, and requesting them to pay her a little attention. His next precaution was, to place one of his officers in a bedroom adjoining that of the lady, with injunctions to watch her motions; and here begins a part of our story, which cannot fail to excite the amusement of our readers. About 11 o'clock at night, the police officer went to bed, accompanied by one of the innkeeper's sons, both having received strict injunctions from the superintendent not to sleep nor speak, but wakefully to be on their guard, ready to detect the lady in the adjoining bedroom, should she, during the night, intrude for the purpose of inquiring too curiously into the contents of their pockets. The watchers obeyed most religiously these instructions till about half past three or four in the morning, when, wearied with their long vigils, they both fell into a profound sleep. At half past six o'clock they awoke! The lady was half an hour gone; and, on the policeman drawing on his unmentionables, he discovered, to his astonishment and mortification, that while he slept he had been robbed of £2. The innkeeper's son on dipping into his pockets made a similar discovery; he had been robbed of all the money they contained, which fortunately was only a few shillings. In another room a gentleman had had £7 in notes abstracted from his pocket-book, and their place supplied by a number of small papers, accounts, and the like, which had been taken from one of his pockets; and some loose silver had likewise been stolen from the table of another bedroom, on which, however, a good watch was allowed to remain untouched. The female, who has been already so often referred to, left the hotel shortly before six in a noddy, having previously partaken of a glass of wine, and at six precisely, left town by the Edinburgh coach. The police officer thus awoke just half an hour too late to find the lady, while his misbehaviour entirely defeated the admirable scheme of the superintendent for detecting the thief. As soon as practicable the female was followed to Edinburgh; but it appears that though the Edinburgh police, in terms of Captain Miller's letter, were waiting at the coach by which she arrived, she escaped their hands, their suspicion having fallen upon another passenger; and, so far as we have heard, she has not yet been apprehended. In all likelihood, however, she will soon be discovered.

Since writing the above we learn that a communication has been received by Captain Miller, that a female calling herself Jane Petrici, or Harris, and answering the description given to the officers, was apprehended in a lodging house in Edinburgh about two o'clock yesterday morning, with about £50 in notes and sovereigns in her possession. The Glasgow officer, though he somewhat bungled the business by falling asleep, along with the innkeeper's son who undertook to keep watch in the same recumbent posture, had the precaution to mark the money which he put into his pocket as a bait to the thief, and his quondam bed fellow did the same. This turns out a most fortunate matter, for among the money found in the possession of Jane Petrici or Harris, were the identical notes, and the 1s. 6d. which were marked. The arrival of the prisoner is expected to-day, when she will be examined. She is said to be a woman about 30 years of age, of exquisite manners and lady-like appearance.—Glasgow Courier.

THE TEETH.—Attention to the cleansing of the teeth cannot be inculcated at too early an age. The neglect of brushing and washing the teeth is invariably attended with disease and decay, which by timely and daily ablutions might have been avoided altogether. Those who have grown up in the omission of this salutary habit should lose not an instant of availing themselves of a practice so essential to general health and cleanliness. The extremes of heat and cold are injurious to the teeth, therefore, the water with which the teeth are cleansed should be what is termed luke-warm. They should be well but gently brushed, both night and morning, the brush should neither be extremely hard nor extremely soft, but should possess a medium quality. Should the gums bleed slightly during the operation, it will produce a most salutary effect. The most effectual and indeed, the only, means of keeping the teeth and gums in a firm and healthy state, is by using the brush daily. Those who possess good teeth should be careful to preserve them. When they are in good order, and free from tartar, the use of a soft brush once a day, with a little dentifrice occasionally, will be quite sufficient to keep them so; and with this the owner should rest satisfied. With respect to tooth-powder, which has afforded to quackery and imposture a spacious field for their operations, whereon the credulity of mankind has enabled them for years to reap a golden harvest, it is obvious to all who give themselves the trouble to think, that the simpler the ingredients of its composition the more beneficial it is likely to prove. I know of none better or more wholesome, either for cleansing the teeth or for strengthening the gums, than cuttle-fish, prepared chalk, and orris root commingled together in equal quantities, which any one may procure separately from any respectable chemist, and mix himself.—Hunter.

"LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION."—Three Indians in the vicinity of Green Bay became converts to the temperance cause, although previously given to "put the enemy into their mouth that stole away their brains." Three white men formed the charitable resolution of trying their Indian sincerity. Placing a canteen of whiskey in their path, they hid themselves in the bushes to observe the motions of the red men. The first one recognized his old acquaintance, and with an "ugh!" and making a high step, he passed on. The second laughed, saying, "me know you?" and walked round. The last one drew his tomahawk, and dashed it to pieces, saying, "ugh! you conquer me, now I conquer you."

STUPIFYING INFLUENCE OF BODILY TOIL.—Nothing, as old experience proves, has a more debetating influence on our intellectual and moral nature than severe and incessant bodily labour; that toil which leaves us so exhausted as to be fit for nothing but sleep, and which, the moment we awake, calls us to renewed exertion. Excellent it may be for the health of the body; to strengthen the sinews and harden the muscles; to quicken and develop all those qualities which we possess in common with the brutes. But it too frequently happens that as the brute becomes perfect, the man diminishes; the sensual nature subdues the rational; the creature can endure any amount of fatigue or devour any given quantity of food after it; that is all we can say of him. He works hard by day and sleeps soundly by night; and toil and slumber make the sum total of his existence.

ADMIRAL PENN TO HIS SON.—Son William, I am weary of the world! I would not live over my days again, if I could command them with a wish; for the snares of life are greater than the fears of death. This troubles me, that I have offended a gracious God. The thought of this has followed me to this day. Oh! have a care of sin! It is that which is the sting of both life and death. Three things I command to you:—First, let nothing in this world tempt you to wrong your conscience; so will you keep peace at home, which will be a feast to you in the day of trouble. Secondly, whatever you design to do, lay it justly, and time it seasonably; for that gives security and dispatch. Thirdly, be not troubled at disappointments; for if they may be recovered, do it; if they cannot, trouble is then vain. If you could not have helped it, be content; there is often peace and profit in submitting to Providence; for afflictions make wise. If you could have helped it, let not your troubles exceed instructions for another time.

IMMENSE PAYMENT OF WAGES.—A correspondent informs us, that "Sir John Guest is paying £44,000 per month in wages, and that he is the only iron master in this country that has erected a public school!" The persons employed at the Dowlas Works are between 4000 and 5000, so that the wages will average about twenty eight shillings per week for each person.—Cambridge.

Fredericton, Dec. 8, 1840.

A CARD.
MR. JACKSON begs leave to tender his sincere acknowledgments to the respectable travelling community in this Province and elsewhere, and more particularly to the Gentlemen of Fredericton and its immediate vicinity, for the kind and liberal support they have afforded him during the time he has conducted his present Establishment in this place.

Mr. J. would not wish to make a parade about the principles upon which his Hotel is founded; but it is well known that he by refusing accommodation to any person that may present himself, unless he bears the impress of respectability, deprives himself of a great amount of profit. The grand governing principles of "JACKSON'S HOTEL" is "the accommodation of respectable persons," and the Proprietor flatters himself that this is fully carried out in the detail.

As it is in Mr. J.'s contemplation to close his present line of business the ensuing Spring, and to commence another here, he hopes to receive the patronage of a Community so well acquainted as this is with him; but should he still continue his services to the Public in his present line, he begs them to understand that he will do so upon a larger and improved scale.

H. JACKSON.
Jackson's Hotel, 14th Dec., 1840.

All the Editors of Papers to which Mr. Jackson is a Subscriber will please insert the above.
