

more sound condition and with greater prospects of increase than under the existing Tariff.

It is, moreover, not immaterial to observe, that whilst the forests of the British North American Provinces are, as yet, inexhausted, and to a great extent untouched, the great demand which has for a series of years existed for the Fir Timber of the forests on the Continent of Europe, particularly of Poland, has led to a material diminution of the supplies to be obtained in the immediate vicinity of the great navigable Rivers, and that, consequently, it is becoming gradually necessary to derive them from the most distant points, thereby increasing the cost of bringing them to the point of Shipment, and thus tending to create an additional demand for the cheaper article imported from British America.

With these views and anticipations, Her Majesty's Government cannot participate in the fears expressed by the Petitioners in reference to the apprehended loss of value in Wharves, Mills and other similar Establishments in the Colony, the want of employment for their labouring population, the decline of the Maritime Commerce, or the injury to the general welfare of the Colony.

Her Majesty's Government are disposed to believe, that these apprehensions are founded upon estimates of the probable prices of Timber drawn from the prices of that article at the present moment, which are unusually low, in consequence of the depression of the Timber Trade owing to general causes; and they venture to hope that the proposed opening of the British Ports to Foreign and Colonial Produce generally at much lower Duties than heretofore, will materially tend to revive all branches of Manufacturing and Commercial industry, and that the Timber Trade will not only participate in that revival itself, but will derive collateral advantages from it, both as respects price and demand.

I would, in conclusion, remark that the measures contemplated for the encouragement of various articles of the Agricultural produce of the British Colonies, if passed into a Law, may be expected, at no distant time, to become of increasing importance and value to the growing population of New Brunswick, whose industry cannot permanently continue to be so exclusively applied to the business of lumbering, as at the present moment.

I have the honor to be, &c., &c.

STANLEY,
